IN THE INSOLVENT ESTATE OF A. AND S. LYONS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Be pleased to give insertion to the following letter, addressed to me by the Creditors of the Firm in England, and received by me on Monday last, and oblige,
Gentlemen,
Your very obedient servant,
ABRAHAM LYONS.
O'Connell-street, July 2.

London, January 19, 1850.
To Mr. Abraham Lyons, late of the Firm of A. and S. Lyons.
Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned creditors of your late firm, fully concur in the views embodied in your letter in the Sydney Herald, and it strengthens our opinion that we were correct in the first instance in refusing to take five shillings in the pound on our respective debts, believing what you now confirm in opinion—that there is 20s. in the pound for all the creditors.
We, however, one and all, beg to express our deep regret at the unexampled conduct exercised towards you by Mr. Saul Lyons, and to assure you that all your commercial transactions with us have been in the highest degree honorable and correct; and we feel convinced you are no party to the disgraceful proceedings which have arisen in the Insolvent Court in this matter.
Trusting you may yet obtain justice and your partnership rights,
We remain, dear Sir,
Yours, truly,
EARLY AND SMITH,
CHANCE, BROTHERS, AND CO.,
JOHN EARLY AND CO.,
T. F. ASHFORD,
CHARLES JAMES BROWN.

It having been reported that the Earl Grey has been taken off the berth for London and laid on for California, we are requested to state that such is not the case, and that the vessel is now loading at Campbell's Wharf.

ACCIDENT TO THE MARGARET AND WILLIAM SCHOONERS.—It is with extreme regret we have to announce that intelligence reached town on Saturday, that our two Geelong traders, the Margaret and William, schooners, engaged in the Cape Otway timber trade, dragged their anchors on Tuesday morning last, and went on shore at Apollo Bay. At the time the occurrence took place, a fearful gale of wind was blowing from the south-east dead on to the shore. The captains of both vessels concur in stating, that a more dreadful sea was never witnessed by them before on anchorage ground. The surf rolled in and broke upon the beach in a manner appalling to behold, even to those on terra firma. Everything was done to secure the vessels to their anchorage, but without effect. As the violence of the gale increased to a height seldom before experienced, even on this open coast, the Margaret began to drive, and in spite of every exertion and the resources of nautical skill, which could be brought to bear on the emergency, she soon after went on shore. The William was not long in meeting with the same fate. When the news reached town on Saturday night, neither vessels had been got off, and it was impossible to ascertain to what extent they had been injured. The William had taken about two-thirds of her cargo in at the time, and would consequently have to be lightened before any attempt could be made to float her into deeper water. The Margaret had scarcely commenced loading. It was confidently expected that both vessels could be got off and brought into port without any repairs being required to be made on the spot. Mr. J. S. Hill is owner of the William; and Messrs. Horsbrugh and Broughton, of the Margaret.—Geelong Advertiser.

The ship Maria arrived last night from California, having touched at Tahiti, the Navigators, and Horn Island, whence she has had a tedious passage. Two days after she left the Navigators, Norton, the second mate, jumped overboard in a fit of delirium tremens, having previously stabbed two men; attempts were made to recover him, but without effect. She reports as follows. TAHITI.—March 19th, the ketch Curlew, from Sydney, arrived and was sold, and now sails under the Tahitian flag. The Cacique, from Hobart Town; River Chief, from Port Phillip; Harmony, from Sydney; Robert Henderson, from Adelaide; Swan, from Launceston; and Josephine, from New Zealand, all bound to California, put into Tahiti for provisions in March and April. The Flash, from Sydney, arrived at Tahiti on the 22nd April. The Elizabeth Starbuck, from Hobart Town, had touched at the Leeward Islands, and some serious disturbances had taken place among the passengers, some of whom proceeded on in other ships. The Hester and Mary, from Sydney, had also touched there. RIATEA.—The Sir John Franklin, from New Zealand, and the Alert, from Hobart Town, had arrived having experienced very bad weather, with loss of boats, stores, &c. NAVIGATORS' ISLANDS.—The French frigate L'Alcmène, 28 guns, Captain D'Harcourt, arrived at Apia on the 21st May, and sailed on the 25th, to proceed to Wallis' Island, the Fejees, and New Caledonia, whence she would come on to Sydney. The Captain had promised to use his best exertions to secure the pirates of the Helen. The wreck of the schooner Clara was sold for thirty-seven dollars. The ship Samuel Enderby, from the Auckland Islands, called at Horn Island on the 5th May, with 60 barrels sperm oil.

The Woodbridge left Newcastle, on Monday, with cattle for New Zealand.

The Emma, brig, Captain Fox, was to leave Auckland, for this port, on the 19th ultimo.

At sea, on the 2nd June, the 2nd officer of the Duke of Roxburgh, Mr. Charles Edgar Griffin, by a sudden lurch of the vessel, was thrown overboard, from the poop; the ship was immediately hove to, and the quarter-boat got ready to lower; but as he never rose again, it was deemed prudent not to lower the boat, in consequence of the heavy sea running. It is the general belief on board, that in falling he must have come in contact with the ship's quarter-galleay, as he did not rise to the surface again.

HONOLULU.—ARRIVALS: March 29, Coquette, twenty-four days from San Francisco; Petrel, from Hobart Town; and Orator, from Sydney, arrived 27th April. May 6, H.M.S. Herald, 32 days from Mazakan. May 7, Fanny, brig, 84 days from Auckland via Tahiti. May 9, Kiwi, brig, from San Francisco, 28 days. The Balmoral, from Sydney the 14th March, on the 25th April, one of the best passages on record. The Princess and Ebenezer cleared out on the 4th May; and Coquette on the 7th for Tahiti. The Sarah Ann, Bee, Shamrock, and Sir John Franklin, were lying at Honolulu when the Duke of Roxburgh sailed. The Duke of Richmond, on the 2nd ultimo, in lat. 22·26 south, and long. 175·35 west, spoke the Woodlark, whaler, 74 days out, with 70 barrels sperm oil.

THE REVENUE AND ITS APPROPRIATION FOR THE YEAR 1849.

No. III.

OUR two preceding articles were occupied with an examination of the General and Crown Revenues. We have now to look into the expenditure of the sums reserved by the Schedules of our Constitution Act; and then to take a comprehensive view of the aggregate receipts and expenditure of the year.

III. CIVIL LIST.

SCHEDULE A.

Receipts—

Appropriated by the Act		£33,000
Transferred from Schedule B		2,152
		£35,152

*Expenditure—

Government	£ 5,833
Judicial	29,319
	£35,152

For the reason stated in the foot-note, these figures do not represent the actual disbursements of the year, to arrive proximately at which, we must add the proportion of one to eleven. Thus modified, the expenditure of 1849 and of the previous year will be respectively as follows:

	1848.	1849.
Government	£ 6,500	£ 6,363
Judicial	31,017	31,984
	£37,517	£38,347

The cost of Government having been less in the latter year than in the former by £137, and the cost of the Judicial department having been greater by £967.

SCHEDULE B.

Receipts.

Appropriated by the Act	£18,600
Balance from 1848	1,943
	£20,543

Expenditure.

Colonial Secretary and Department		£ 6,005
Office of Superintendent, Port Phillip		832
Colonial Treasurer and Department		3,487
Sub-Treasurer's Department at Port Phillip		1,029
Auditor-General and Department		2,597
Executive Council		595
Stationery for above Departments		679
Pensions		620
Miscellaneous Expenses		431
		£16,275
Transferred to Schedule A	£2,152
Balance unexpended at 31st December, 1849	2,116
		4,268
		£20,543

Allowing for the expenditure not brought to account, the comparison between the last two years will stand about as follows:—

Expenditure in 1848	£17,560
Ditto in 1849	17,845
Increase	£285

SCHEDULE C.

Receipts.

Appropriated by the Act	£30,000
Balance from 1848	2,937
	£32,937

Expenditure.

Church of England	£14,925
Presbyterian	2,710
Wesleyan Methodist	762
Roman Catholic	10,519
	£28,946
Balance unexpended at 31st December, 1849	3,991
	£32,937

* Note by the Auditor-General—"In accordance with the new system of keeping the public accounts, recommended by the House of Commons, the statements of expenditure under Schedules A., B., and C., comprise the actual payments made up to the 31st December, 1849, only, omitting, of course, those made for the service of 1848 and previous years, which have been included in former Statements. These Statements, consequently, in most cases, comprise the expenses incurred during eleven months of the year only. The Abstracts of following years will, however, include the whole of the payments made from 1st January to 31st December, in each year, inclusively."

GENERAL SUMMARY.

Having examined the three divisions of our public finances separately, namely, those of the General Revenue, of the Crown Revenue, and of the Civil List, let us now bring them all together, and look at their aggregate results.

RECEIPTS IN 1849.

General Revenue		£323,763
Crown Revenue		236,670
INCOME OF THE YEAR		£560,433
Balances from 1848—
General Revenue	£23,558*
Crown Revenue	59,363
Schedule B.	1,943
Schedule C.	2,937
		87,801
		£648,234

EXPENDITURE.

General Revenue		£194,376
Crown Revenue		186,282
Civil List—Schedule A.	£35,152
" B.	16,275
" C.	28,946
		80,373
EXPENDITURE OF THE YEAR		£461,031
Balances at 31st December, 1849—
General Revenue	£71,345
Crown Revenue	109,752
Schedule B.	2,116
" C.	3,990
		187,205
		£648,234

In looking at this enormous aggregate of expenditure, it must be borne in mind that, from the cause already explained, the reality is much greater than appears on the face of the accounts. There can be no doubt that the expenses actually belonging to the year were not less than £500,000. Thus a population scarcely amounting to 250,000 souls has cost, in its civil and judicial establishments, its public works, and its importation of labour, for a single year, full £2 per head for every man, woman, and child, of whom it is composed!

* In the Recapitulation of the Abstract of 1848, this balance is stated at £23,458—a discrepancy which we have not been able to account for.

CHINA.

WE have Hongkong papers to the end of March. Intelligence had been received of the death of the Emperor TAOUWANG, or the "Glory of Reason." The particulars had not been announced, but it was reported that he would be succeeded by his fourth son. In consequence of the Yellow River having risen over its banks, and flooded a large tract of country, great misery and distress were prevalent in the north of China; thousands were said to be dying of hunger in the neighbourhood of Shanghae.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

TUESDAY.

THE SPEAKER took the Chair at twenty minutes past three.

STANDING ORDERS.

The SPEAKER reported that his Excellency the Governor had assented to the alteration of the Standing Orders with reference to Bills for the paving, cleansing, &c., of towns.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR.

Two Messages were brought in from his Excellency the Governor, viz.:—

No. 18.—Enclosing a draft of a Bill for the better cleansing and drainage of the City of Sydney, and for promoting the health of its inhabitants. Ordered, with its enclosure, to be printed, and to be taken into consideration on Wednesday week.

No. 19.—His Excellency the Governor transmits to the Legislative Council a copy of a despatch from the Right Honorable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated the 13th December, 1849, together with copies of the correspondence therein referred to, which has taken place on the subject of providing passage to this colony for certain distressed seamen belonging to colonially registered vessels. 2. It will be perceived that in the particular cases alluded to, the cost attending the maintenance of the seamen, and their re-conveyance to the colony, has been charged to the British funds; but her Majesty's Government conceive that this is an item which should fairly be borne on colonial funds, and have accordingly issued instructions to the Deputy Commissary General not to make any similar payment in future from the Military Chest. If the Council, therefore, should still decline to vote the necessary funds for this purpose, the effect of such refusal, Earl Grey observes, will inevitably be to prevent relief being afforded by other ships to distressed sailors from New South Wales, with the same readiness as heretofore, by which the commercial interests of the colony cannot fail to be injuriously affected.—Ordered, with its enclosure, to be printed.

BRIDGE OVER THE NEPEAN.

Mr. MARTIN presented a petition from certain landholders at Penrith, protesting against the passing of a Bill, at present before the House, for enabling Mr. William Russell to erect a bridge over the Nepean, upon the ground of its probable interference with their interests.—Received.

PORT MACQUARIE.

Mr. NICHOLS presented a petition from 117 inhabitants of Port Macquarie, praying for the restoration of the Harbour Master's establishment at that place.

The petition having been received, the hon. member gave notice of his intention, on Friday next, to move a reference of this petition to the Pilots' Regulation Committee.

CARCOAR.

Mr. DARVALL presented a petition from certain residents in the district of Carcoar, praying for an increase of the police protection.

The petition having been received, Mr. DARVALL gave notice of his intention, on Thursday, to move its reference to the Police Committee.

REGISTRATION OF DEEDS.

Mr. MOOR presented a petition from the Bankers, Magistrates, &c., of Geelong, praying for a separate Registration of Deeds.—Received.

BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved, that the Standing Orders, in reference to Private Bills be suspended preliminarily to his motion for leave to introduce the Bill to incorporate the Bank of New South Wales. This step, he explained, was rendered necessary, in consequence of the gentleman who had the conduct of this Bill, having been misled by a draft of their Standing Orders to suppose that three advertisements in the Government Gazette, would be sufficient.

This motion having been carried without opposition, the honorable gentleman proceeded to move for leave to bring in a Bill to Incorporate a certain Banking Company, to be established under the name, style, and title of "the Bank of New South Wales," and for other purposes in such Bill to be mentioned.

This motion was also carried without dissent.

BRIDGE OVER THE NEPEAN.

Mr. WENTWORTH, pursuant to leave, previously obtained, brought in a Bill to enable Mr. William Russell to erect a bridge over the Nepean, and to charge toll thereon.

The Bill having been read a first time, the honorable member gave notice of his intention, on Tuesday next, to move its reference to a Select Committee, and a similar reference of the petition presented by Mr. Martin, from Penrith, in connection with the same subject.

WOLLOMBI AND MACDONALD RIVER.

Mr. DANGAR moved, that the petition from the police district of Wollombi and the Macdonald River, praying that provision be made in the Estimates for 1851 for a Police Magistrate for that district, presented to him on the 28th ultimo, be referred to the Select Committee on Police. These districts, he remarked, had several times been alluded to as requiring peculiar attention with reference to their Police protection, owing to the scattered nature of the population, and to the fact of the population being composed chiefly of the middle classes. He was no advocate for the appointment of Police Magistrates; but there were certain districts in which such officers were necessary; and he conceived that the district from which the petition came was one of these.

The motion was put and carried.

RACING PRIZES.

The motion of which Mr. Murray had given notice, for an annual prize of £100 for Yass Races, stood over in consequence of that gentleman's absence.

The next motion was one by Mr. MOOR—"That an address be presented to His Excellency the Governor, praying that his Excellency the Governor will be pleased to place on the Estimates for the ensuing year, the sum of one hundred pounds, to be called the 'Prince's Plate,' to be run for at the next races at Melbourne, or some other race-course in the county of Bourke."

Mr. MOOR said, that notwithstanding his vote against a similar motion a few evenings ago, with reference to the Homebush Races, he would be acting with no inconsistency in pressing the present motion upon the House. There were, however, various circumstances which induced him to withdraw this motion; and more especially his knowledge that the Government had determined upon applying to the service of Port Phillip the whole of its revenue.

Leave was then granted to withdraw the motion.

COLONIAL SPIRITS DUTIES ABOLITION BILL.

Mr. MARTIN rose to move that the Colonial Spirits Duties Abolition Bill be read a second time. Believing, as he did, that this was the most important measure which had ever come under the consideration of the Council, he must deeply regret that it had fallen to his lot to introduce it. He had hoped that lot would have fallen upon more experienced shoulders—that it would have been sustained by greater influence and greater power than he thought he could ask at the hands of the House. No one, however, had come forward, and therefore he had felt it incumbent upon him to take the duty on himself. He was sorry to say, in opening the question, that intimation, which amounted to a threat, had been given by the Colonial Secretary, that he would oppose this measure, and with the forces he had at his command on the nominee members of the house, he had little doubt but that the present motion would be rejected. It would certainly have been better if a motion like the present, involving as it did so much of political principle and economic science, had been taken in hand by legislators more experienced than himself. This, however, they had refused to do, and he now presented himself before them to do what he considered was an act of duty. But whatever might be the result of the motion, he hoped it would not be forgotten that the Colonial Secretary had boasted, on the occasion of the first reading of the measure, that he would oppose it and defeat it. (Cries of no, no, from the Government benches.) The Colonial Secretary at least, relying on the support the nominee members would afford him, had promised his uncompromising opposition to the Bill. (Hear, hear, from the Colonial Secretary.) (The hon. member for some minutes continued to argue that the Colonial Secretary meant to oppose this Bill by his authority over the votes of nominees of the Crown. He then recapitulated the substance of the Bill, which has already appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald.) Now, it had been industriously circulated, that every grower of grapes, and every still-owner, would have a right to sell and dispose of spirits in any quantity under this Act. This was not true, for it was required that any spirits they might sell should be distilled from wine made of the grapes of their own growth. But the Bill went even further than that. It asked only that the grower should have a license to distil spirits from the produce of grapes of his own growth; and, further, that he should have a certain quantity of land under cultivation. By the present Distillation Act, every person having a license might distil from grain grown abroad; but the grower of grain here must also become a licensed distiller before he could apply his produce to the most profitable purpose. Under the present Act every person wishing to distil spirits, whether from the produce of this colony or that of other countries, was forced to become a licensed distiller. Another objection which had been raised to this measure was, that it gave the power to distil to cultivators of two acres of vineyard. But he was not wedded to this limitation. He was perfectly willing to make it ten acres if the Council so pleased. He had no doubt that the arguments adduced against the measure would be mainly based on the fact that it was an interference with the modern doctrine of free trade. That this measure might be considered by some hon. members as a retrograde step in that legislature which went to provide unrestricted and unprotected commerce with all nations. It might suit the Colonial Secretary to sneer at any measure which might be introduced in opposition to this policy. But he (Mr. Martin) contended that this doctrine of free trade was not the established policy of England. Every great political question in England showed that the principle was not yet settled, and the battle would have to be fought over again, and that the so-called system of free trade would soon be put an end to. The honorable member then read at great length extracts from the Quarterly Review, enforcing the principle of protection to home-grown produce, and proceeded to argue that if the growth of wool now was unprofitable or should become unprofitable, the enterprise of the colony must look to another pursuit. But, what was that other pursuit to be? There was already a limit affixed, by those whose opinions were valuable, to the production of wool and tallow. That production could only continue profitably to the colony to the boundary of the requisite demand. And where, he would ask, was the other pursuit which was to enlist colonial enterprise and colonial labour? (The honorable member read further extracts from the article in the Quarterly Review, to show that a reduction of the prices in the necessaries of life was not an undeviating symptom of prosperity.) He thought the argument used by this writer completely demolished the arguments of the free-traders, and that it could not be shown that any practical benefit to the people had arisen from them. But it would no doubt be also argued that the interference with free trade doctrines would make—a tremendous interference with the revenue of the colony. He thought the interests of the colony were of vaster importance than the mere maintenance of salaries, which ought to be reduced. But he believed it would be easy to show that the revenue would not be violently affected by this Bill. He found that the land under vintage cultivation was only 995 acres. To produce from this cultivation, even taking that one-half were converted into brandy, would only be about 9500 gallons. And what was this compared to the importation of foreign spirits, which he found last year to be 169,164 gallons. The home-made spirits were thus shown to be not one seventeenth part of the consumption of the colony, even allowing that one-half of the wine made in the colony was distilled into spirits. To supply the demand for spirits of colonial growth, would even now require the cultivation of upwards of 16,000 acres of land. The probable deficiency in the revenue would amount to about £2703. The enormous balance of the revenue derived from the duties on spirits were derived from imported spirits only. Nor was it to be believed that the abolition of the duties on colonial grown spirits would reduce the revenue. An immense quantity of rum was imported into the colonies from the East Indies, at a price of 1s. 1d. per gallon. With the duty, this spirit could be sold at something over 4s. 6d.; and when it was considered that six gallons of wine were required to make one gallon of spirit, it was obvious that the colonial manufacturer could not come into competition with the importer to any extent. And so with regard to spirits distilled from grain. He believed that it would require a bushel of grain to produce one gallon of proof spirit. With the expenses attendant on malting and other processes, that bushel of grain would cost 4s. 6d., which was the price at which the East Indian rum could be sold. No spirit made from malt could, he was informed, be sold to a profit in this colony at anything like so low a price as 4s. 6d.; while brandy distilled from wine could not get into the market under 11s. or 12s. Then, with regard to gin and whiskey, the case was the same. The same cost in producing would be required, while the same inferiority of the produce would prevail. Therefore, the argument that this measure would affect the revenue fell to the ground altogether: for it would not tend to diminish the revenue, except in such degree as it might serve to beat inferior imported spirits out of the market. The same arguments would also apply to another objection urged to this Bill, namely, that it had a demoralising tendency. He did not believe by the passing of this measure that the consumption of spirits would be augmented; but that on the contrary the spirits drank would, if equal in quantity, be better in quality. Nor had they any right to overlook the advantages which a measure like this would afford to the colony. He found by the returns annually furnished by the Colonial Secretary, that within the last ten years nearly thirty-four millions of bushels of grain had been imported into this colony at a cost of a million and upwards of money. Every bushel of which, excepting a small proportion of rice, might have been raised within the colony. It required, therefore, no argument to show, that while £100,000 had been annually taken from the pockets of the colonists for grain, £100,000 more had been taken from them for duties on spirits, which were not their own manufacture, and which did not encourage in any degree colonial enterprise. There was one other point of view to which he would entreat the attention of the House to this question. It was this—"Were they always to remain a nation of shepherds and stockmen? Were they always to deal in wool and tallow, and wool and tallow alone?" They might make wine, they might manufacture spirits; but this protection was sought for those who had not the time—the greater skill to come into competition with them. Foreign nations had an advantage in this respect. He sought for this measure only to put the colony on an equal footing with them. It must have occurred to any person who had reflected on the subject of the agricultural progress of different countries, that irrigation was the mainstay of their prosperity. Even in the olden times, the countries of the East devoted to this subject their attention; and to this he believed and hoped the attention of the colonists would be turned; and this Bill would give them a new incentive to do so. And he earnestly hoped that this Bill might be passed, as he believed it was essentially necessary to the growth of the prosperity of the country. In its present social position, the community seemed represented by two classes—a class of commission agents, and a class of wool growers. Between those two classes the colonists were divided; but those two classes preyed upon them and divided the spoil. He repudiated this principle, which made the prosperity of the country to depend upon sheep farming only. He knew it was the fashion in the colony to enlarge upon the intellectual and educational acquirements of the gentlemen who devoted their lives to sheep-keeping in the interior. But engaged as they were in pastoral pursuits, he would inquire what benefit did the colony derive from the talent or intellect of these men? How did they contribute morally, religiously, or socially, to the welfare and advancement of the colony? No doubt the number of these people was large, and if they were collected together their influence would be important; but separated and dispersed as they were, a small body of humbler people was of infinitely more importance than them. The Government had done nothing to support the wish to develop the agricultural resources of the colony. On the contrary, when applied to by a public company for land to grow sugar as a national experiment, it actually raised the upset price from £1 to 30s. per acre. Instead of giving the land, which it would have been the policy of a wise Government to have done, it actually raised the price. He thought he had now shown sufficiently, that as far as the promotion of agriculture was concerned, that this Bill was designed to increase, rather than to diminish the colonial commerce; while, with regard to morals, education, and intellectual improvement, he could little hope for advancement, whilst all the energies of the colony were lent to the furtherance of one pursuit. Another advantage, which he believed this Bill would give was, that it would give a value to the land of the colony—not the factitious value which it formerly possessed, and did even now possess, but an intrinsic value. He had now gone through such arguments as he believed to be necessary in support of this measure, and which he believed to be required on social, moral, and political grounds, notwithstanding the threat with which it had been met by the Colonial Secretary. That threat might have influence with those over whom the Colonial Secretary had control, but he hoped it would fall harmless on the minds of independent members of that House. He could not say a Bill like this would produce a sudden return of prosperity to the colony, but he believed it would tend to brighten the prospects and to reanimate the energies of those who had cast their fortunes in this country. That it would encourage the industry of the country, by the belief that that industry might be turned to good account. That with a climate of unexampled salubrity, with every assistance which could be afforded by nature, the tide of prosperity of the colony would no longer be doomed to ebb and flow as it had done, but that by asserting the right of protecting home industry, a great social, moral, and political advancement, might be secured to the country. With these observations he begged to move the second reading of the Bill.

Mr. DANGAR seconded the motion.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY: On a question of such great importance, he felt it necessary to trespass on the House; and perhaps he might claim their indulgence if he detained them longer than was usual with him. He had first, before proceeding to the question at issue, to advert to the opening portion of the honorable mover's speech, in which he (the Colonial Secretary) had been specially alluded to. The honorable member had chosen to charge him with having made use of a threat with regard to this measure. He (the Colonial Secretary) denied having done anything of the sort, or that he had boasted of any influence which would enable him to defeat such a measure. He sought not to exercise any official influence in that House, and if he had any influence in it over other members, he believed it arose from the general confidence that was entertained of the purity of his public conduct. It was at least in this confidence that he relied, and he could say that he had never found the reliance misplaced in that House. He should hardly have noticed this insinuation of the hon member, but that he thought it but proper to set himself right with the House before entering into the grave and important question before them. He felt bound to oppose this measure, nor could he see any ground on which it deserved the support of the House. In the first place, he believed its effect would be frightfully to demoralise the community. If they chose to give spirits cheap to the people, they must remember that while they were accumulating crime, they were taking from the Government the means of repressing and punishing crime. This Bill, while it would go to increase the facility of obtaining the greatest incentive to crime, would diminish the means by which that crime could be detected and punished. But it was not alone in its social effects that he objected to this Bill. He objected to it on economical grounds. A similar cause in other countries had not been found to produce the results desirable here; neither did he believe that the desired results could be produced by any such means. He would take the case of the Cape: many millions of money had there been thrown away, under the shadow of this protective influence, until experience proved that there they could never produce a wine which would be purchased by the foreigner, or which could be profitable to the grower. He could not help believing, moreover, that the effect of this measure would be to destroy this colony as a wine growing country. It would tend to make it a spirit distilling country, and any increase in the growth of the vine would be for the increased distillation of spirits alone. The quality of the grape would be neglected, and large tracts of land, which might be made available for a certain sum of vineyard cultivation, would be cultivated with no other ultimate view than that of making spirits. It was perhaps well for him here to state that the wine-grower of the colony was protected. That all imported wine paid a duty of 15 per cent. on its value, while colonial wine paid none. And that further, the Act, 13th Vic., No. 9, section 3, empowered the owner of wine grown in his own vineyard, to sell in any quantity not exceeding two gallons, and also to give it to his servants in part payment of wages. There was also a further encouragement given to the manufacture of colonial spirits in the Act, 11th Vic., No. 7, which exempted from duty the brandy used in the fortification of colonial wine. Other regulations existed in the Distillation Act, which were also favourable to the colonial wine-grower. There was nothing in that Act to prevent the using of the lees of wine in colonial distillation. Again, the duty charged on colonial-made brandy was only 3s. 6d., while that on imported brandy was 6s., showing a differential duty in favour of colonial spirit of 2s. 6d. per gallon. It was also to be remembered that colonial spirits might be exported free of any duty whatever, and these precautions he thought served to show that due protection had been afforded to colonial interests. In reference to this question, it would be further remembered that an application was made to the Home Government some years ago, to equalise the duties charged on the wines of this colony and wines the growth of the Cape. At that period the duty charged on Australian wines was 5s. 6d., while that on Cape wines was only 2s. 9d. But this difference was discovered, and the imperial Act now admitted Australian wine at the same duty as Cape wine. As some reference had been made by the hon. member to statistics, he (the Colonial Secretary) would trouble the the House with a few. He found from the annual returns which he had the honour to lay upon the table of the House, that in 1843, the number of acres under vineyard cultivation was 512; the number of gallons of wine made, 33,915; the number of gallons of brandy, 751. In 1849, he found the number of acres under vineyard cultivation was 1127; the number of gallons of wine produced, 100,163; the number of gallons of brandy, 17,081. From these statements it would be seen that the wine-growing interest had shown pretty clearly that it was not repressed or kept down in the colony. But he had yet graver objections to this measure, on principle. His opinions as to the salutary effect of free trade had been long fixed, nor could he ever again be led to believe that it was the province of Governors or legislatures to select certain articles of commerce on which to impose either restrictive or protective duties. The parties interested would best find out the markets in which they could sell or buy, and their profits or their losses should not be restrained by any act of the Legislature. The only article of commerce which he thought the Legislature had a right to lay hands on and to tax was this article of spirits, and he believed they were a legitimate article of taxation, because our trade in spirits rendered a large police force necessary. The hon. framer of this Bill had, in support of his views, quoted largely from an able article in the Quarterly Review. But to show how the opinions of able men differed on this question, he might perhaps be allowed to read a critique on this very article in the Quarterly, published in the Economist newspaper. (The hon. Colonial Secretary here quoted at considerable length the article alluded to.) Such were, in his opinion, the able and convincing arguments made in reply to this attack on free-trade measures. But this measure was not only confined to spirits distilled from grapes, but extended to spirits distilled from grain also. On this point, also, the honorable member had quoted statistics, and in answer he (the Colonial Secretary) would refer him back to statistics, and he found that, from 1844 to 1849, the total amount paid by the colony for imported bread stuffs, including potatoes, was £905,500, or somewhat more than £55,000 per annum. Now, he thought this return most conclusively proved that the colony could not supply, at present, a sufficient quantity of grain for human food; and what then the necessity of affording protection to the cultivation of grain, for the purpose of turning it into spirits. Such a measure must be injurious—must be fraught with ruin to the material and moral interests of the colony. And he would further add, that while this large importation of foreign grain was going on, how would it be discovered whether it was colonial or foreign grain which was distilled, and to which spirit the discriminating duty should reach? Some eight years ago, a discriminating duty had been placed on spirits—a differential duty was imposed on spirits distilled from grain, and on spirits distilled from sugar, in favour of the former. But the attempt then made to secure distillation from grain, turned out to be utterly fallacious; the great bulk of the spirits produced in the colony being distilled from sugar and molasses, and that at the cost of a great fraud on the revenue of the colony. There was also another strong objection to which this measure was open, and that was, the violent change which it would suddenly bring about in many circles. There were many, perhaps who had made their arrangements, and had embarked their fortunes in reliance on the present state of the law, and the proposed alteration might bring precipitate and immediate ruin on them. With regard to the 2nd clause of the Act, too, he could not but think it open to strong objections. It gave every one the right to sell these colonial spirits, whether licensed or not licensed, to the great prejudice of the licensed publicans, who were taxed to a large extent. The words of the Act were clearly to give the right of sale of these spirits to all who grew them, and this he considered a gross invasion of the licensed publicans. But apart from this, give this right to make spirits, and this unlimited right to sell, and who could conceive a more crude—a more dangerous—and destructive legislation than this measure proposed. He earnestly hoped that in opposing it he should be assisted, not only by the nominees but by the representative members, who had the interest of the country at heart. He would beg briefly to refer to one argument which had been urged as to the revenue derived from these spirits. It had been argued that to relieve colonial spirits from duty would be a very slight interference with the revenue; but he considered that small as the amount of protection given would be, that to that amount it would be unjust. He looked upon all protection as robbery. He therefore set his face most resolutely for carrying out the government of this country. The Bill would entail a most bold and hazardous innovation. The revenue of the country was raised upon a protective principle by duties on imported articles; no doubt, if they had to begin again, they might begin upon a much better principle; but the present measure ran a tilt against the whole existent system, and would cast it over, not gradually, but immediately. The hon. gentleman sought, doubtless, to set himself up as a political reformer, whose dictum was to set aside that of all the home politicians. Upon this question, any one, by quoting extracts and arguments from the works and speeches of clever men at home, could prolong a debate ad infinitum. The principles on which they sought to set out in legislating for the benefits of the colony, were at variance with those which had been found to benefit the elder countries of the world, and to promote the commercial wealth of their inhabitants. He objected to the Bill upon three grounds—social, political, and fiscal. About the two former he should say but little, for people had a right to get drunk or not, as they pleased, and it was useless to attempt any legislative interference for preventing this vice. The effect of such a step upon the revenue was one against which they had a right to guard. The very case of the protection duty upon tobacco proved that no system of this nature would materially benefit colonial industry: for this latter duty had not had the effect of increasing to any extent the production of this commodity, or to assist it in its competition with the American produce. He denied that England had suffered in taking the lead in the adoption of free trade principles, and was convinced, on the contrary, that other countries which had as yet maintained the old protective systems, would be compelled, by the pressure from within their own limits, to follow the example which England, the greatest commercial nation of the world, had set them. It was true that the grain imports of England had increased during the time that free trade had prevailed, but there was a corresponding increase in her exports, which had not been alluded to.

Mr MARTIN, in reply, referred first to the answer of the Colonial Secretary, as to the charge against the latter of having held out a threat of opposing the voices of the Government officials and nominees to this measure. Whatever might be said by the hon. gentlemen, he said it was very singular that these gentlemen were always found voting together, upon any question in which the Executive thought its interests were concerned. No tangible reason had been given to show that the loss by the revenue would be to the extent mentioned by the Colonial Secretary, and the quotations on the other side had neither force nor application. The growth of the additional grain and vines would not diminish the quantity of wool and tallow, as the former would be produced by labour at present profitless; and the country would, therefore, be enriched in proportion to the extent of the additional production. He had never intended to confer the privilege of retailing upon the growers and the distillers; and if there was anything in the Bill which could produce such an effect, he should have been quite ready to assent to any alteration of it in committee. The whole of the declaration upon this point was therefore thrown away. From the very moment that the United States had become an independent country its policy had been protective. It was owing to this policy that the growth of cotton had been made general. He doubted not that this Bill would be rejected; but the discussion would not end here, for another Bill would be introduced into the House, upon which hon. members would be called on to say whether, at all events, they would not encourage this species of production by a differential duty. It was probable that in this case many who were now inclined to vote with the Colonial Secretary would take a different view.

The House then divided upon the motion, with the following result:—

Majority against the Bill ... 12

JUVENILE OFFENDERS' PUNISHMENT BILL.

The above Bill, which had been placed on Orders of the Day for third reading, was ordered to be further considered in Committee on Thursday, for the amendment of the seventh clause.

CATTLE PROTECTION BILL.

The consideration in Committee of this Bill was postponed until Thursday.

Council adjourned at eight P.M., until three o'clock, on Thursday afternoon.

COUNCIL PAPER.

EARL GREY'S REPLY TO DR. LANG'S CHARGES.

No. 24.

Copy of a Despatch from the Right Hon. Earl Grey to Governor Sir Charles A. Fitz Roy.

Downing-street,
15th December, 1849.

Sir,—1. In some of the London newspapers, published on the 17th and 19th of last month, you will find that Dr. Lang has printed a letter which he addressed to me, and in which, with a considerable amount of personal invective, he complains that he has been treated with discourtesy, that the emigration schemes propounded by him have been unjustly rejected, that undue assistance has been afforded to the clergy of the Church of England and of Rome as compared with the clergy of Scotland, and that in the selection of emigrants for New South Wales an unfair preference has been shown to Irish orphans belonging to the Church of Rome.

2. The charge of discourtesy, so far as it may relate to personal interviews, must rest on Dr. Lang's own assertion, and can only be met by a direct counter-assertion. I do not remember, nor does he state, that I had any interview with him myself. But I am assured by the gentlemen of my department who had any occasion to see Dr. Lang, that his statement on this point is entirely without foundation. In so far as the charge may refer to the style employed in written communications, you are in possession of all the principal letters which have been addressed to Dr. Lang, and they may speak for themselves.

3. But one remark which I must make upon this subject is, that in the course of nearly three years during which Dr. Lang informs me that he has been in England, he never once addressed a complaint to me, either as to the discourtesy which he alleges that he met with, or on any other of the topics upon which he now animadverts. It was only when he had already embarked in the ship which was to convey him from this country, and it was no longer possible that he could be called upon to make good his statements, and after it had been discovered that his conduct in certain transactions might become the subject of a prosecution at law, that he addressed, not in reality to me, but to the public, which is unacquainted with the circumstances to which he adverts, a letter, calculated to create an entirely erroneous impression as to what has passed between himself and the departments of the Government with which he has been so long in communication.

4. The papers enclosed in my recent Despatch, No. 189, of the 30th of November, contain evidence of the following facts—first, that the plans for the promotion of emigration which Dr. Lang successively proposed to me differed so little from each other, and that in each new proposal he took so little notice either of the objections pointed out to those preceding it, or of the offers repeatedly made to him to promote the objects he had in view if he would assent to more reasonable terms, that it is difficult to suppose that he was acting in earnest, or wished to bring the matter to any practical conclusion. Secondly, that while he was thus keeping in ostensible communication with this office, he persuaded the public that he was carrying on negotiations with Her Majesty's Government which were likely to lead to a favourable result, and that even important concessions had been made to his advantage. Thirdly, that by a discreditable though transparent manœuvre, he pretended to make a request to me before the departure of a certain vessel, but kept back the letter until it had sailed, and in the meanwhile sent out to you by that very ship a letter designed to make you believe that his request had been granted, and to lead you thereby into making certain payments of money and certain grants of land, which he knew he was not entitled to claim. Fourthly, that having been repeatedly warned that any emigrants sent out in the manner in which those despatched on that occasion were sent out, would not be entitled to grants of land, he induced them nevertheless to pay for their passages, and to emigrate under the impression that they were so entitled; so that these emigrants arrived under circumstances altogether different from those they expected, and some of them, it may be inferred from your report, in actual want of the means of subsistence. These are the charges, founded on the evidence of his own letters, under which Dr. Lang now labours; and their gravity is such, that unless they can be refuted, it would seem almost unnecessary further to notice any of his allegations.

5. But thinking that it may be more proper to afford you the means of disabusing the public mind upon the subject of Dr. Lang's misrepresentations, which will doubtless be widely circulated in the colony, I shall proceed to examine such of them as are reducible to issues of fact: from these it may be judged what weight should be attached to such of them as are matter of opinion.

6. He complains that his schemes of emigration were rejected, and implies that a general disposition was shown to discourage any plans for promoting that important object. Now in the letter from this office to Mr. Bazley, enclosed in my Despatch, No. 188, of the 29th November, I had occasion to show that Dr. Lang's scheme of emigration went merely to confer upon himself, or any person whom he might take into partnership with him, a large pecuniary profit, without any advantage to the public. The only effect of his proposal would have been to transfer the selection and conveyance of emigrants to less trustworthy hands than those to which it is now confided, at a greatly enhanced cost. More money must have been paid for the emigrants, or, in other words, fewer could have been sent to the colony, in order that Dr. Lang and his partners might make their private gain, and also exercise a power of admitting or rejecting, at their pleasure, the candidates for emigration at the expense of the colony. The important duty of selecting and conveying emigrants to the colony would have been taken out of the hands of public officers responsible for their conduct, and entrusted to those of private and irresponsible individuals. Whether the public would have gained by the change may be judged by the fact, that in the only ship despatched by Dr. Lang, of which the arrival has yet been reported, sickness prevailed to an extent, of which, I believe, there is no example in any of the numerous ships which of late years have proceeded to Australia under the superintendence of the Emigration Commissioners.

7. But his land schemes were perhaps even more objectionable. The particulars of these are fully stated in the papers enclosed in my Despatch, No. 189, of the 30th of November. The real effect of what Dr. Lang suggested was—that vast tracts of country, in the most promising situations, should be set apart for him, and the persons whom he might take into partnership, without any other payment whatever than the merely nominal rent which is demanded for sheep-runs lying in the unsettled districts, so that neither settlers now residing in the colony, nor emigrants coming from the United Kingdom should be at liberty to buy any of these lands; but that it should be open to Dr. Lang to purchase from time to time such portions as it might suit him to select. Nor even then was Dr. Lang or his company to be required to pay for them; it would be enough to show that a certain number of emigrants, considered equivalent to the price of the lands, had reached the colony under their auspices. In short, the whole progress of private settlement in some of the best districts of the colony was to be arrested, in order that Dr. Lang's company might at their leisure pick out such portions of these districts as, in the lapse of several years, they might find it convenient to appropriate, without their at any time paying to the public any part of the price of these lands in money.

8. It is needless to say, that no minister of the Crown could have so far betrayed his duty as to listen to these extravagant schemes for private emolument. And yet, these were the proposals of which the rejection is treated by Dr. Lang as a proof of opposition to sound and disinterested plans of colonization.

9. So little, however, did there exist any such desire, as he alleges, to throw obstacles in his way, that I find, that when he proposed to make deposits of money, in order to acquire the right, under the established regulations, of sending out emigrants, the Commissioners, in their desire to afford him every assistance, went almost beyond their duty in the extent to which they bore with his numerous evasions and irregularities. On this subject you will find the particulars of what took place stated in the enclosed memorandum from the Commissioners. You will perceive from it that Dr. Lang was continually behind-hand in making the deposits of money which he promised, and that he never afforded proper opportunities, although frequently reminded of it, for inspecting the emigrants; but, instead of this, while he professed his readiness to do what was requisite, he always found some excuse for its omission. The Commissioners dispensed in his favour with some formalities, and made extraordinary efforts to complete others, and did not finally refuse to admit of any more relaxations of their rules to facilitate his operations, until they were compelled to do so by the impossibility of keeping Dr. Lang to any of his engagements. The return which they have received for their concessions in his behalf is, that in leaving the country, Dr. Lang has asserted that he has met with nothing but incivility and obstruction.

10. Next I proceed to Dr. Lang's remarks upon the granting of assistance to clergymen and ministers to reach the colony. He begins by mentioning that he had selected and sent to the colonies twelve or eighteen ministers, and that he was taking out in the same vessel with himself twenty-four candidates for the ministry. He then states, that as "the Emigration Department was sending out Episcopalian Ministers and Romish priests at the public expense," he thought that "the same indulgence might be extended to such ministers" as he had referred to; but that his application to this effect was "most ungraciously refused." For this statement I can find no foundation in fact. The only application relating to the conveyance of clergymen to the colony which Dr. Lang is recorded to have made, or of which I have any knowledge, is the one of which a copy was enclosed to you in my Despatch, No. 146, of the 8th September last, and in which, after making one of his repeated proposals to form a company upon inadmissible terms, Dr. Lang asked that free passages might be granted to such ministers and schoolmasters as were recommended by its agents. The reply which I directed to be made to him, as you are aware from my former Despatch, was as follows: "Until the company may be organised, and make the deposits of money which would entitle it to nominate and despatch large bodies of emigrants, His Lordship considers it premature to discuss the accessory details further than to state that whenever numerous emigrants have been sent out to the colonies, the Government has always been disposed to promote also the emigration of ministers of the same religious persuasion with themselves." It appears, therefore, that although I refused to enter beforehand into the discussion of all the privileges which might be conceded to a company, until it were ascertained whether the proposal for its foundation might not turn out, as had so often occurred before, to be illusory, yet far from expressing any unwillingness to send out Presbyterian ministers with Presbyterian emigrants, I declared the general willingness of the Government to adopt such a course.

11. I need scarcely observe, however, that under no circumstances could it have been in my power to provide in Dr. Lang's favour, if such were his meaning, for the passage of 36 ministers and candidates for the ministry.

12. His allusion to the practice of the Emigration Commissioners requires explanation. They have been accustomed to offer passages to schoolmasters of the same religious persuasion as the emigrants going out in any vessel they were about to despatch. An association of gentlemen had offered to facilitate the supply in that capacity of clergymen (who must be the most desirable class of teachers), if the Commissioners would somewhat improve the character of the accommodation to be allowed. This was assented to, with the understanding, of course, that clergymen of the Church of England would only go with English emigrant ships, and subject to the express proviso that the whole number of clergymen so sent was not to exceed the proportion of one to every two thousand emigrants.

13. By the memorandum from the Commissioners, you will see that it so happens that not a single priest of the Church of Rome has hitherto been sent out by the Emigration Commissioners, although it is no more than fit and proper, and is fully intended, that whenever a priest is proceeding to the colony, he should be sent, if possible, in one of the ships conveying orphan emigrants belonging to that Church. And whilst some clergymen of the Church of England have gone out as teachers under that arrangement, only one ship has since gone out with Scotch emigrants, and no Scotch minister was proposed to proceed as a teacher in that vessel. Indeed, it is evident that until there may be intelligence of the existence of congregations requiring pastors, and of places of worship to be supplied with ministers, it would be very imprudent to send a clergyman in every emigrant ship which sails.

14. I have entered into these explanations, because I should be very sorry if it could be supposed that Her Majesty's Government were insensible to any just claims on the part of any of the Presbyterian clergy, the value of whose services is too well known to require acknowledgment or praise from me. At the same time I must observe, that Dr. Lang, as you are aware, has long since ceased to have any connection with the Church of Scotland, and if he holds a commission to act in the selection of ministers for any other organized body of Christians in the colony, he certainly did not produce it to me in making his application. It is very possible that he may have such authority, but he did not show it, and yet it could hardly have been more than reasonable to expect some evidence of it, before I could agree, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, to provide, at the suggestion of an individual, payment of the passages of a large number of ministers of religion, without any authentic information at all of the existence of a field for their labour. Into these considerations, however, it is unnecessary to enter further, inasmuch as the question was not really submitted by Dr. Lang, otherwise than as contingent upon the formation of a company which was never constituted.

15. It only remains to notice Dr. Lang's complaints respecting the Irish Orphan Girls. These complaints may be soon disposed of. The Government has certainly never adopted the course of sending equal numbers of emigrants from each of the three United Kingdoms; and though Dr. Lang seems to consider it a grave matter of complaint that this was not done, it would obviously have been an unjust mode of proceeding, considering the great inequality in the number of their respective populations. The Emigration Commissioners have been ordered to adopt the fairer rule of sending from each division of the United Kingdom a quota of emigrants proportioned to its share of the total population of the realm.

16. Female Orphans were selected to form part of the Emigration from Ireland, because various benevolent persons familiar with the state of society at home, and others connected with the colonies, concurred in thinking that they were a class of Irish emigrants which might at times be received with great advantage both to the colonies and to themselves. Dr. Lang is quite mistaken in treating of them as exclusively Roman Catholics, for it happens that all the first orphans proceeded from the North of Ireland, and were Protestants. But whether they be Roman Catholic or Protestant is a question which Her Majesty's Government cannot permit to have any weight in deciding on the selection of the Queen's subjects for a boon which is, and ought to be, open to all without distinction of religion, and it is obvious that the only ground on which Dr. Lang, or any one else, could have any pretence to complain, would be, if any partiality were shown in sending more than its due share from some one of the three divisions of the United Kingdom.

17. Now by the memorandum received from the Emigration Commissioners, you will find that whilst the correct proportion of emigrants, according to population, would be about sixty per cent. for England, ten for Scotland, and thirty for Ireland.—the Scotch emigrants have in fact amounted to nearly fifteen per cent., and the Irish to twenty-eight per cent., or less than their proper share. So far from there having been that injustice towards Scotland, or towards Protestant parts of the Kingdom, of which Dr. Lang thinks proper with so much acrimony to complain, it turns out that the inequality for the moment, is precisely in the opposite direction. This, however, of course is only a temporary inequality, which in the conduct of a large and constantly fluctuating service must sometimes occur, and which it will be the care, as it is the duty, of the Commissioners to redress as soon as possible by bringing up any arrears of emigration which are due to Ireland.

18. In the mean time this fact may show how little excuse Dr. Lang has had for appealing on this subject to a class of feelings too easily excited; and for endeavouring to stir up mutual jealousy and religious animosities between different portions of his countrymen.

19. Here I close my examination of his letter. It has been no grateful task to expose so many inaccuracies. But far more do I regret the occasion by which they have been elicited; and that a man who once held the honorable post of head of the Scotch Church in the colony, should have issued so many unfounded and intemperate assertions, because he has not been allowed to carry on schemes of emigration from which he would have derived great individual gain at the cost of the public.

Memo. of the principal correspondence between Dr. Lang and the Colonial Land and Emigration Commissioners during Dr. Lang's recent residence in England.

Dr. Lang arrived in England early in 1847, and after one or two unimportant communications, he, on the 13th of August, addressed to this office an enquiry, whether any portion of the emigrants about to be despatched to New South Wales would be selected from Scotland. He was informed, in answer, that a fair proportion of the emigrants would be selected from Scotland, and that if he had any suitable emigrants to recommend, the Commissioners would be ready to take their cases into consideration; an offer, however, which he made almost simultaneously to act as agent for the Board, was declined.

Twelve months afterwards, on the 7th September, 1848, Dr. Lang submitted the scheme of a proposed Colonization Company, of which he was to be the chairman, and applied for very extensive relaxations of the established rules in their favour. He was answered that under the then existing circumstances of emigration, the Commissioners would not feel justified, in fairness to the colony, in recommending a compliance with this application.

On the 9th December, Dr. Lang gave the Commissioners notice that he intended to send out emigrants to Moreton Bay, in the ship Chasely, then in the London Docks, in virtue of a deposit to be made for the purchase of land. On the same day he was told in reply, that as soon as the money was deposited directions would be given to survey the vessel, and to ascertain on what terms the owners would take out emigrants.

On the 13th December, the Commissioners informed Dr Lang that it had been reported to them that there were 150 passengers on board the Chasely, whom they presumed to be his emigrants, and reminded him that he must send in the names and particulars of the people, to enable them to be examined. On the 15th, the day before the ship was appointed to sail, he was again reminded that the particulars of the people had not been sent in, and that in the absence of this information the Board could not grant passages.

On the 16th December, he replied, excusing himself for the delay—stating that it did not arise from any wish to contravene the regulations, but that he had been under the erroneous impression that the usual forms of application would not be required, and that he would in future attend to the regulations. This letter was received on the 18th December at 4 o'clock. An immediate answer was given, dispensing with the forms, and stating that Lieut. Lean would be authorised to examine the people at Gravesend upon the nominal list given in; and that passages would be granted to as many as the deposit, which was then only £500, would cover. Thus, so far from throwing impediments in the way of Dr. Lang, the Commissioners went out of their usual course, to afford him facilities, both by waiving the ordinary forms, and by expending the whole of his deposit in the conveyance of emigrants, instead of restricting him to five emigrants for every £100.

Dr. Lang had promised, it will be seen, to be more careful in future in observing the established regulations; but he nevertheless continued as irregular as before, especially in the matter of deposits of money, which were rarely made in time to cover all the emigrants in each ship. This office, however, was so unwilling to throw difficulties in his way, that they continued to pass his emigrants to the full amount of his deposit; and it was not till the month of June, 1849, that the Commissioners peremptorily refused to sanction any further irregularities, or to pass any emigrants for whom the deposit had not been previously made.

In respect to the refusal to send out Scotch ministers, while Episcopal ministers and Romish priests were being sent out at the public expense," Dr. Lang's statement is not borne out by the facts. The authority from the Colonial Office, to send in the Commissioners' ships clergymen of the Church of England, was dated, 11th April, 1849. Since that date passages have been provided for six clergymen of the Church of England; but as yet no clergyman of the Church of Rome has come forward.

It is evident, that as clergymen receive their passage in consideration of their undertaking the religious instruction of the emigrants on the voyage, it would have been impossible to send out a Scotch clergyman in any vessel in which the majority of the emigrants were not Scotch. But since the beginning of this year, only one vessel has sailed in which a majority were Scotch, and that vessel, the Blonde, sailed in September last. The Commissioners had not then before them a single application from a Scotch clergyman for such an appointment; nor had any such person, as far as they can recollect, ever been proposed to them from any other quarter. They had, therefore, no power of appointing a Scotch clergyman to this vessel.

Lastly, in regard to Irish emigrants, it will be seen from the subjoined numbers that the Irish emigration to New South Wales, since the resumption of emigration in 1847, so far from being in excess is, up to the present time, slightly in arrear. The proportion of the population of the three kingdoms is about—

England	49·6 per cent.
Scotland	9·8 "
Ireland	30·6 "

The number of emigrants sent out to New South Wales since the resumption of emigration has been

English	14,088
Irish	3,638
Scotch	6,911
	24,637

being in the proportion of—

English	57·2 per cent.
Scotch	14·8 "
Irish	28· "

Of the Irish, 2488 were orphan girls, who were taken as being a class well suited to the peculiar wants of the colony, and as being for many reasons the most eligible class of Irish emigrants that it was possible to select. They have in general given satisfaction in the colony, and until Dr. Lang's letter appeared, the idea of their producing any effect on the religious persuasion of the Australian colonies probably never occurred to any one.

COLONIAL LAND AND EMIGRATION COMMISSIONERS.

November 30, 1849.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

INSOLVENT COURT.

TUESDAY.

BEFORE W. H. KERR, Esq., Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates.

In the estate of James Callwell, an adjourned single meeting, further adjourned for a fortnight.

NEW INSOLVENT.

Patrick Hayes, of Parramatta, draper. Amount of liabilities, £1511. Amount of assets—Personal property and moneys, £1050; book debts, £132:—£1182. Amount of deficiency, £329. Mr. W. Perry, official assignee.

MEETING TO-MORROW.

In the estate of William Haurott Cory, an adjourned single meeting, at half-past 10 o'clock.

In the estate of Thomas George Sawkins, Richard Gow, and Michael Doyle, certificate meetings, at noon.

THE RAILWAY FESTIVAL.

This day, the most important work ever undertaken in this colony is to be commenced. The first turf of the Sydney Railway is to be turned, and from the great interest which has been excited, we have no doubt that if the weather is fine there will be the largest assemblage of people that has met in Australia. We believe the following are the principal arrangements which have been made:—

The company will be admitted at 12 o'clock, and the bands will play appropriate airs until the arrival of his Excellency the Governor.

His Excellency the Governor and suite will arrive at 1 o'clock exactly, and be received at the gate by the Directors of the Railway Company; the President will escort the Honorable Mrs. Keith Stewart from the gate to the centre of the circle, which will be formed round the spot where the turf is to be turned; the stewards will be placed inside the circle to preserve the boundaries, and will receive his Excellency and suite with the Directors.

On His Excellency's entrance at the gate of the enclosure, the Military band will play the National Anthem, and continue it until the arrival of the party in the circle.

The President will initiate the proceedings, and introduce the Engineer of the Company, who will hand to Mrs. Stewart the spade prepared for the occasion. Mrs. Stewart will then turn the turf, and place it in the barrow, which will be wheeled away by the Manager of the Company, who, on his return, will deliver a congratulatory address to his Excellency the Governor on the commencement of this great enterprise during his administration; to which His Excellency will reply. The band will then play "Rule Britannia," and the assembled Company will give three cheers.

The President will then conduct Mrs. Stewart to her seat at the table, in the tent for refreshments; the band playing "The Roast Beef of Old England."

Carriages are to approach the Railway ground by Botany-street, opposite Harris-street, and to enter Cleveland Paddock through an opening made in the fence, about two hundred yards from Parramatta-street, and to draw up at the gate on the south side of the enclosure.

Provision is made for the sale of tickets at the entrance of the tent enclosure.

COURT OF REQUESTS.—This Court will be opened, pro formâ, at the usual hour, and adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning (Thursday), in consequence of a Government Order for the closing of all public offices.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENTS.

ESTIMATE of the Cost of the present Military Establishment of South Australia, for one year.

1. Pay, Money Allowances, and Contingencies of Detachment 11th Regiment, consisting of 3 officers and 63 non-commissioned officers and privates		£1950 0 0
2. Pay to Military Staff (Command Pay, &c.)		109 10 0
3. Pay, Money Allowances, and Contingencies of Commissariat Establishment, consisting of Assistant Commissary-General, Clerk, and Officekeeper		560 0 0
4. Pay and Expenditure of Barrack Department, including—
Pay to Barrack-master (Assistant Commissary Acting)	nil.
Pay of Barrack-Sergeant	£ 54 15 0
Purchase and repair of Furniture and Utensils, washing and repairs of Bedding, and Miscellaneous Expenditure	85 0 0
Rent of Barracks and Office-rent	280 0 0
Lodging-Money for 4 officers and Barrack-Sergeant	305 0 0
Fuel and Light	260 0 0
		984 15 0
5. Transport		80 0 0
6. Rations (the stoppages made from the pay of officers and men cover the cost)		nil.
Total cost of Military Protection		£3684 5 0

NOTE.—Estimate 4, which is given in detail, embraces (probably) all the items and amounts which the colony would be called upon to defray (less the pay of Barrack-Sergeant), in the event of military protection being limited to a "Guard in the Capital," that guard consisting of the present strength. A diminution in the strength would lead to a proportionate reduction in the estimate. It should, however, be observed, that this expenditure would be covered by the saving to the colony, in being enabled to make its remittances to England for emigration and other public services, through the medium of the Commissariat, at par. The average of those remittances for the five years ended 31st ult has been above £40,000 per annum (£223,000 in all), the charges on which, if made by bank drafts, at the average rate of exchange—say 3 per cent premium—would have been about £1200 per annum.

W. H. MATURIN,
Assistant Commissary-General.

Commissariat, Adelaide, June 11.

SOCIETY OF LICENSED VICTUALLERS.—The seventh Quarterly General Meeting of this Society was held on Monday last, July 1, at the Committee Rooms, Skinner's Hotel, George street. The Secretary read the half-yearly Report of the Committee of Management. It showed the steady progress of the Society, as evinced by the increase in the numbers of its members, and honorary members, as well as by the favourable state of its funds. The Report adverted to several topics now before the local legislature of material interest to all parties connected with the Society, whether licensed victuallers, distillers, or brewers; and the attention of the members was particularly called to the "Malt Liquors' Bill," and the "Colonial Spirits Duties Abolition Bill," wherein it was threatened to invade the privileges of all classes of licensed dealers in fermented and spirituous liquors. The Committee invited the attention of the society to the letter (lately published in the Sydney Morning Herald) from Mr. H. Fisher, of the Glenmore Distillery, wherein the unconstitutional principles involved in the second Bill, named above, were especially brought before the notice of the Licensed Victuallers' Association. The Committee further notified their intention to bring a Bill before the Legislative Council, at an early moment of the present session, for amending and repealing various obnoxious clauses in the present Acts for licensing public-houses, theatres, and other places of public amusement. Lastly, the Committee intimated that the preliminary arrangements for publishing a weekly newspaper, in connection with the society, were in sufficient train to allow of the immediate appearance of the first number, and that the Sydney Courier, would be published forthwith. The Report was received and adopted, and the thanks of the meeting tendered to the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, and General Committee, for their zeal and ability in conducting the executive business of the Society.

REPRESENTATION OF THE CITY.—A meeting of the friends of Mr. J. R. Holden was held at the Royal Hotel, last night, pursuant to notice. The object of the meeting was to afford Mr. Holden an opportunity of explaining to the electors his views on certain matters which are now uppermost in the public mind. In reference to transportation, he is decidedly opposed to its resumption to this colony in any shape or under any terms whatever. He is favourable to an extension of the franchise, though not prepared to say exactly to what extent; and with reference to the representation of this city, he always was and still is of opinion that its representation is so inadequate as almost to amount to no representation at all, as compared with the rest of the colony. In respect of education, considering a good education to be better than a pocket full of money, he would, if elected, do all in his power to place within the reach of the colonists those means and appliances which would render the expense and risk of sending their sons away from Australia, in order to fit them for their station in Australia; as, independently of the necessity of providing means for the qualification of the colonial youth for the several professions, the experience of the past was, that no parent was justified in incurring, not the expense merely, but the risk attendant upon his son's sojourn in England, where, without an adviser, he is more likely to acquire the vices than the virtues of England. In respect to his regard for religious toleration, he would not say a single word beyond a reference to the signatures appended to the requisition, in obedience to which he had come out as a candidate,—embracing, as they did, he believed, the names of persons of every shade of religious opinion in the colony, as quite sufficient voucher that he was likely to act up to the precept, "to do unto others as he would wish them to act towards himself." In regard to the privilege question, brought forward by Mr. Wentworth, he was strenuously and diametrically opposed to it. The law of libel was sufficiently stringent without any aid of this description: and he would be found opposing, to the utmost, every attempt to gag the press,—in which light he regarded the measure proposed by Mr. Wentworth. If they thought fit to return him as their representative, he would go in unfettered by any man or set of men—with a determination to do his duty without fear, favour, or affection; measures, and not men, would be his motto. While on this subject, he would take the opportunity of openly and flatly contradicting an assertion which he was informed had been made in that room a few days ago—that if the electors returned him, they would by that act add a joint to Wentworth's tail. He would follow in the wake of no man—pin his faith upon the sleeve of no man—do the bidding of no man; but, on the principle he had just announced, would in every case vote according to his conscience, irrespective of the conduct of any other member of the legislature. Before sitting down, he stated that this was the third time he had been solicited to come forward as a candidate for the suffrages of the citizens, and that he considered was an honour which he should ever have in proud remembrance; he had hitherto declined, because he feared that circumstances might arise to render necessary his return to England; but in at last acceding to the request of his friends he had come to the resolution that at whatever expense or inconvenience to himself, he would not leave the colony until the expiration of the period for which this election would last—possibly only to the end of the present session.—There were, perhaps, 400 persons present, who, with the exception of some half dozen noisy men, and about a score of boys, heard the candidate with attention. A resolution was adopted approving the statements of Mr. Holden, and the meeting broke up.

IMMIGRATION.—Fifteen married agricultural labourers by the Maria may be hired on board that ship on Friday. The orphans by the same vessel will be ready for hiring in about a week.

CONSECRATION.—The Lord Bishop of Sydney will consecrate the new Church of St. Paul's at the Pennant Hills to-morrow. This neat little building is a Chapel of Ease to the Church at Ryde.

POLICE OFFICE.—The business of this Court was yesterday transacted by the Right Worshipful the Mayor, with Alderman Egan; neither of the gentlemen on the roster were present. For Bench duty, to-day, Messrs. Cooper, Donaldson, and Dawes, have been summoned; but, being a holiday, it is not intended that any business beyond the drunkard list shall be entered upon COMMITTALS.—An aboriginal, who describes himself as Native Billy, was on Monday evening given into custody by one Hart, a dealer, in Pitt-street, for stealing from his shop a bason of the value of 2s. 6d. which was found in his possession, and yesterday, Billy was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.—On Monday night, a woman named M'Lean, was given into custody by a publican named Smedley, for stealing a kettle, of the value of 5s. from his premises. She was found with the property in her possession. She had nothing to say in her defence, and she was committed for trial.—On Monday, afternoon, Patrick Leary, a resident in Sydney-place (otherwise Durand's-alley) was apprehended for having on the previous day stolen one pair of boots from the residence of a shoemaker named Charles Trinouth. Yesterday, the prosecutor deposed that on Sunday, he and his wife were away from home a portion of the day, and on his return he missed a pair of navigator's boots, value about 16s. and from having learned that Leary, who for two or three days of last week had been working for him, had been about the premises in his absence, suspected him of being the thief. In the course of Monday morning, he met Leary in Bathurst-street, and saw peeping from under his apparel a pair of boots which he knew were those which had on the previous day been stolen from his house; he laid hold of one of them, whereupon Leary knocked him down, and made off, followed by Trinouth as far as Durand's-alley; on getting up with Leary, the boots had disappeared, but Leary and a number of other persons began to abuse and pelt Trinouth, who was glad to make his escape from the den, and trust the affair to Constable Cannon, who, in the course of the day, apprehended the rascal, and yesterday he (the prisoner) was committed for trial.

CHIMNEY ON FIRE.—About half an hour after midnight of Monday, Constable Toole discovered that the chimney of a house in Clarence-street, occupied by a person named Hare, was on fire. Toole procured the attendance of Mr. Bown, of George-street, with Wame, from the Police Office, who with the assistance of Serjeant Coyle and Constable M'Donald succeeded in extinguishing the fire before any considerable damage was done.

ASSAULT.—About dusk on Sunday evening, as Mrs William Perry, in company with her son, were passing Turner's buildings, Surry Hills, a man named Thady Forde went up behind Mrs. Perry, and threw his arms round her neck, and it was not until the arrival of assistance that Mrs. Perry was enabled to disengage herself from her disagreeable position. Upon being asked what he meant by such conduct, he opened up such a volley of abuse and obscenity that Mrs. Perry and her deliverer were glad to be allowed to walk away. Yesterday, however, the gentleman was called before their Worships the Mayor and Alderman Egan, to answer for his conduct. He said he was drunk, and knew nothing of it. Their Worships thought it might be a useful warning to inflict a penalty of £5 for the assault, and in default of payment to be imprisoned for two calendar months.

ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY.—On Saturday evening, as Dr. Read, of the Glebe, was riding along the road leading to Newtown, two men suddenly jumped off the footway, one of whom attempted to seize the bridle, and the other aimed a blow at the rider; the horse, however, started aside rather abruptly, in consequence of which both men failed in executing their intentions.

LUNATIC ASYLUM.—A board has been appointed by His Excellency the Governor to enquire into the state of the Lunatic Asylum: it held its first sitting on Monday. The members are Dr. Shanks, Principal Medical Officer, Surgeon Jones, R.N., and Surgeon Chapman, 11th Regiment.

THE INFIRMARY. State of the Infirmary for the month ending 30th June, 1850:—In house last report—men, 64; women, 20; children, 5; total, 89. Admitted—men, 46; women, 19; children, 6; total, 71. Discharged—men, 41; women, 9; children, 1; total, 51. Died—men, 18; women, 1; children, 1; total, 20. Remaining at this date—men, 51; women, 29; children, 9; total, 89. Number of persons in house during the month, 160—being medical cases, 71; and surgical, 89. State of the Dispensary, new cases—men, 46; women, 62; children, 38; total, 146. Prescriptions issued for—men, 235; women, 277; children, 180; total, 692. Home cases, 46; visits, 140.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—I do not know that a more admirable reason could be given that the legislature should not make a "gold standard" than that furnished by your very facetious correspondent, Philo Ricardo, in your paper of to-day. I and many others are obliged weekly to carry barrow loads of silver to the banks for deposit, and if told to be off with our barrows, what are we to do in these times of perpetual robbery? (Perhaps Philo, in his exulting wit, would say keep it and be d——d!) There exists a mutual confidence and security at present between the public and the banks, which would be destroyed, without any good reason, other than the gratification of such pertinacious gentlemen as Philo Ricardo, who will not see the difference between a country when the coinage is in active operation, and a colony depending upon its currency for many casual circumstances. Philo does not attempt to attack the position that a bank solvent, in all its relations, and with plenty of coined silver in her coffers to meet her liabilities, might be made bankrupt, by Act of Council, under his admirable legislation.

Whether it would be an advantage to the public, or other ways, I will not pretend to determine; but there is one thing a "Gold Standard" would effect—it would control the rise in the exchanges. But, I confess, I would rather see them governed by principles of free trade and competition than by Act of Council.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
G. M.

THE GORHAM CASE.

(From the Times, March 9.)

THE decision of the Privy Council upon the appeal of Mr. Gorham against the Bishop of Exeter has at length been delivered, and the substance of this judgment is embodied in the Report of the Judicial Committee to the Queen in Council, with the almost undivided sanction of the Prelates and the Judges who heard the case. Contrary to the opinion of a large portion of the Churchmen of this kingdom, and to the expectations generally entertained at the commencement of the arguments in this cause, the judgment of the Court of Arches is reversed, and Mr. Gorham is to be instituted to the vicarage of Bramford Speke. Upon a careful review of this elaborate discussion, and a close consideration of the calm and careful judgment which was yesterday delivered in the Council Chamber, we are satisfied that no other decision could be arrived at consistently with the strict rules of legal construction, and with those high considerations of public policy which are indissolubly united to the peace and stability of the Church. It is not necessary, in order to justify and maintain this view of the case, that we should enter, any more than the Lords of the Council have entered, into a theological discussion, which is beyond our province and above our powers; and we do not intend to imply any participation in the peculiar opinions of Mr. Gorham, or any doubt that the doctrine of regeneration by and in baptism is the doctrine of the Church of England. We apprehend that nothing has been said or decided in the course of these proceedings which can impugn the faith of the Church in this doctrine; and that however Mr. Gorham's opinions may be grafted on the peculiar interpretation of an article, those of the Bishop of Exeter rest upon the broad ground of orthodoxy. But the real question, and the sole question which the Privy Council had to decide, is, whether the meaning attached by Mr. Gorham to the articles and formularies of the church of England is so "directly contrary and repugnant" to her established doctrine (to use the words of the statute of Elizabeth) as to disqualify him for the disc

The trial of this case, which was one of fraudulent insolvency, was postponed until the August sittings, upon the application of the SOLICITOR-GENERAL, grounded upon an affidavit by the Criminal Crown Solicitor, as to the absence of a material witness.

HORSE STEALING.

Michael Flynn pleaded not guilty to an indictment for stealing a horse, the property of William Larnach, at Rolland's Plains, on the 1st of June last. Having been warned for trial at the August sittings, the prisoner was remanded until that time.

NEW MAGISTRATE.

G. F. DAVIDSON, Esq., was sworn in a Magistrate of the Territory, in the usual form.

BIGAMY.

William Parrott was indicted for having intermarried with one Ann Martin, his first wife, Mary Tyrrell, being then alive.

It was at first proposed to postpone this trial until Tuesday, on account of the absence of Mr. H. K. James, the Registrar of the Lord Bishop of Sydney. It was explained, that Mr. James having left the Police Office before the witnesses were bound over, and having refused to attend when sent for by the Bench, he escaped from entering into a recognizance to appear as a witness. As a matter of courtesy no subpœna had been sent by the Criminal Crown Solicitor to Mr. James, but he had been twice told on Saturday by that gentleman that the case would come on, and he promised to attend. Under these circumstances both the Solicitor-General and his Honor were of opinion that Mr. James ought to have attended, and the latter intimated that the better course would be to send a subpœna, returnable immediately. The case then stood over for a short time, until Mr. James could be sent for. After a short lapse of time Mr. James came, and in reply to a question from the Solicitor General, stated that his absence was unavoidable, and that he had not intended any disrespect to the Court. The precise nature of the excuse tendered was inaudible to the reporters, but it was apparently admitted as satisfactory by the Court. The case was then proceeded with.

It was shown by a copy from the Registry of St Philip's Parish Church, that on the 11th of November, 182?, a marriage was solemnised by the Rev. Mr. Hill, between William Parrott and Mary Tyrrell, and a witness was examined who partook of the wedding supper. It appeared that they lived together for a good many years, and had several children, of whom some were alive, and were grown up to maturity, but for the last eighteen or nineteen years had been living apart. Mrs. Parrott herself was also produced in Court, and identified as the Mary Tyrrell who was married to the William Parrott then in the dock. It was proved that the witnesses of the first marriage had since died. The second marriage was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Lewis, minister of the Wesleyan chapel, at Chippendale, on the 3rd of July last, and both the prisoner and Ann Martin were identified by the rev. gentleman. In addition to the proof already mentioned, of the first marriage, there was evidence of admissions on the part of the prisoner. It was proved that he had gone to the sister of his first wife, and had endeavoured to procure her intervention, in order to keep back her sister from giving evidence against him. It appeared also, that there had been an equity suit, to recover from the prisoner certain property belonging to his daughter, and his wife was subpœnaed, as a witness, from Maitland. On the occasion of her arrival, the prisoner and another man (believed to be a member of the prize ring) were on the look out to stop the woman as soon as she came from the steamer; but by a little manœuvering she was got away without the prisoner being aware that she had actually arrived. It was shown that he asked for the woman, on board the steamer, by the name of Mary Parrott.

Mr. FOSTER, for the prisoner, submitted that the first marriage had not been proved with sufficient strictness. This objection, however, was over-ruled by His Honor, and the learned counsel then proceeded to address the Jury, resting his defence upon the assumption that the prisoner had contracted a second marriage in the belief that his wife had been dead for some years.

In support of this ground of defence, the prisoner's daughter Esther Parrott, (about twenty-two years of age), was called, and stated that about four years ago she remembered a letter being brought to her father, stating that her mother was dead. She also said that she had worn mourning for her mother. This young woman gave singularly inconsistent testimony. She knew nothing as to who brought the letter or how it came. She admitted that a female named Sarah Hutchinson had acted as her father's housekeeper, her brother and sister (the latter sixteen years of age) being then resident in the same house, but she did not know whether or not this woman was her father's mistress. Knew that Mrs. Hutchinson had left her father, but did not know whether the departure of this woman from his house took place five years or a single day, before his second marriage. Witnesses were likewise called to show that the prisoner was a hard-working and industrious man, and had borne a good character for honesty.

To contradict the evidence of Esther Parrott, it was proved that within fifteen months the prisoner had admitted a full knowledge of his wife's existence, and as to where she was living. Prisoner said at this time, that "he deserved one hundred lashes every morning" for the manner in which he had treated his wife, and that he had endeavoured in vain to induce her to return home. These admissions came from the prisoner after the witness to whom they were made had ascertained that Mrs. Hutchinson, who passed as Parrott's wife and bore his name, was not really married to him. The same witness, a Mr. Harris, proved that Esther Parrott had not only admitted to him her knowledge of the fact that the mother was alive, but had told him where he might write to her when her evidence was wanted in the Equity suit. It appeared that Mr. Harris's interference in that suit (which proved successful) was as the guardian of one of prisoner's daughters, who was apprenticed to him; and in consequence of prisoner's children being greatly ill-used by the woman with whom the prisoner was cohabiting. There was likewise evidence that prisoner and his first wife had been in company with each other (although not cohabiting) within the last three years. It appeared that prisoner mentioned some years ago having heard that his wife was dead, but made no allusion at that time to any letter from which he derived his information. At the Police Office, however, he produced a letter of this kind, dated four years and a-half ago. This letter was produced in Court, and appeared on inspecting it to bear no postmark, and although evidently written by a person of intelligence, was worded in so singular a manner as raised a presumption that no really intelligent man would communicate intelligence of this kind in such a way. These features of the document alluded to, taken in connection with the evidence as to the prisoner having actually communicated with his wife since the time the letter purported to have been written, were relied upon by the Solicitor-General as proofs that the letter was an entire fabrication.

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, in summing up, drew the attention of the Jury to the fact, that as Maitland, from whence the letter purported to have been sent, was but a short distance from Sydney, and was easily communicated with, it was unreasonable to suppose that a man would put his family in mourning and contract a second marriage, without taking some steps to ascertain whether the intimation conveyed in the letter as to his wife's death was true or false. His Honor also requested the Jury to inform him whether or not they believed the evidence of the witness Esther Parrott.

The Jury, after having been absent for about a quarter of an hour, found a verdict of guilty against the prisoner, but recommended him to mercy upon account of his "good character for honesty and industry." They also expressed their belief that the witness Esther Parrott "had not adhered to the truth."

His Honor intimated to the Jury, that although anxious to attach every weight to the recommendation of the Jury, he did not conceive that there was in the present instance any substantial ground for their recommendation. The offence of which the prisoner had, beyond all question, been guilty, was one of a very gross and aggravated nature against public morality, and it was his moral character, therefore, that must be taken into account. Upon this point there had been no evidence in his favour, while, on the other hand, there were proofs of gross immorality in his ordinary mode of life. His Honor promised, however, to make further enquiries as to his character, and to give every possible consideration to the recommendation of the Jury, as well as to communicate with his brother Judges respecting it.

The learned CHIEF JUSTICE then addressed the witness Esther Parrott upon the gross nature of the offence of which, in his own opinion, as well as that of the Jury, she had been guilty: polluting, as it did the fountains of justice as their very source. For her gross prevarication of evidence he found her guilty of contempt of Court, and, as a punishment for this offence, he committed her to the custody of the Sheriff, to be imprisoned for the space of six months.

This being the only case ready for trial, the whole of the Jurors summoned for this sitting of the Court were discharged.

TUESDAY.

Before their Honors the three JUDGES.

The Court sat to-day by special appointment, to hear arguments in arrest of judgment in criminal cases.

THE QUEEN v. STANLEY.

The prisoner was tried during the late Moreton Bay Assizes, before Mr. Justice Therry, for stealing several money orders, severally for the payment of 1s., 2s., and 2s. 6d., the property of Thomas Grenier. The information contained no count alleging that the paper on which these orders were written was of any value, and as such had been stolen. The prisoner was found guilty. It may be remembered, however, that a point was taken by the learned Attorney-General himself at the trial, viz., as to whether the indictment could be sustained, inasmuch as these very money orders, each being under the value of one pound, were, in the language of the 7 Geo. IV., No. 3, "absolutely void and of none effect, any law, &c., to the contrary notwithstanding. His Honor at the trial promised to mention the point to the full Court; accordingly, to-day,

His HONOR having reported the case,

The ATTORNEY GENERAL stated, it was important to get the decision of the full Court as to the validity or non-validity of the orders in question. They were current in the land and appeared to him to be illegal, and on that ground could not be the subject of larceny. The point to be decided was not important to the prisoner; as he at the same assizes was tried and convicted of another offence, and is now actually undergoing sentence. A difficulty had also arisen under the above Act as to enforcing the penalty, incurred by a party issuing such orders, expressing on their face—they were payable for a sum less than 20s., because the Act referred to in the Act in question, showing how the fines or penalties were to be disposed of, had been repealed.

Their HONORS severally delivered their opinions, clearly holding that the prisoner could not be indicted for stealing that which the legislature had declared was absolutely null and void, and of no effect. And granting that the penalty could not be enforced, for the reason stated, yet that did not affect the case, for the order or orders would still be void, though the act of issuing them was not punishable. It might be likened to the case of a man marrying, not having heard for seven years of his wife; yet, after that time, his wife does turn up, the husband would not be punishable, nor would the second marriage hold good in law. The Court did not give any opinion on the point, whether the penalty could be enforced or not, but suggested that the Attorney-General should recommend that an information be placed before a magistrate, with a view of raising that question.

THE QUEEN v. DUIGAN AND GRIFFITHS.

The prisoners were indicted some time since, for having aided one "Angelina Mary Hughes (Hallett)" to escape from justice, by harbouring, concealing, and assisting her, they, at the same time being well aware that she had committed the felony of child stealing. The prisoners were included in the same indictment with the principal (Hallett). The prisoners were both found guilty. A point, however, was raised at the trial in their behalf, in arrest of judgment, and which now came on for argument.

Messrs. FISHER and BRENAN, for Griffiths, said, the point to be argued was, whether the statute, on which the prisoners (accessaries after the fact) were indicted, &c., applied to accessaries after the fact, or made those persons guilty of felony. They submitted that the statute (9 G. IV., c. 1) did not include accessaries after the fact: the prisoners, therefore, were liable to punishment at common law—as for a misdemeanour; consequently, being indicted as for a felony, that indictment was not good.

Mr. SMYTH, for the other defendant, advanced the same argument.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL contended at some length, that the statute in question did provide for the case of accessaries after the fact,—when

The COURT, interrupting him, said, the 13 Vic., No. 7—passed during last session—quite decided the point in dispute. That Act made the prisoners, though accessaries after the fact, guilty of felony; and related further, as to the manner and mode of indicting them, viz.—whether separately or with the principal felon.

Upon this Act being referred to, the counsel for the prisoners declined to press further the point taken.

Their HONORS then severally said, they were disposed to think that, independent of the last Act referred to, the judgment of the Court ought to have been against the prisoners; at any rate, that Act put the question beyond any manner of dispute.

Mr. BRENAN, in mitigation of punishment, urged that his client was an American, and, as the evidence would show, had not been mixed up, except in a very slight degree, with the offence charged against him.

Mr. SMYTH also, on behalf of the other prisoner, urged that the case was not very strong against his client.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL observed that the fact of Griffiths being a foreigner, or American, was no ground of mitigation of punishment. Englishmen are held amenable to the laws of the United States, as in the case of M'Kenzie, for burning the steamer Caroline,—and so they ought to be held amenable to our laws, when under their protection.

His Honor Mr. Justice DICKINSON, in sentencing the prisoners (he having tried them), said, they had been found guilty of aiding and abetting one who had committed not only a scandalous but most cruel offence. As the offence, however, of which they stood charged was not of frequent occurrence, the sentence he was about to pass would be lenient; for one reason of punishment was, to deter others from the commission of offences. It would be fully understood by the public, he hoped, that concealing offenders would for the future be severely punished. Addressing Griffiths in particular, his Honor said, the fact of his being an American was no ground of indulgence being shown him. The laws of his own country were similar to the laws of England, and he would remind him, that from the evidence at the trial, that of his endeavouring to conceal Mrs. Hallett from the knowledge of the constables, he was nearly the cause of her death by his sitting on the lid of a very small box, in which she was secreted. It was his Honor's firm conviction, from the evidence, that had he sat on that box, she being within, one or two minutes longer, she would have died, and he (the prisoner), according to law, would have been guilty of murder. The sentence of the Court was, that each of the prisoners be sentenced to six calendar months' imprisonment in the Darlinghurst Gaol, to be computed from the day of conviction.

Before His Honor Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, Chief Justice.

BIGAMY.

The passing of sentence upon William Parrott, convicted of this offence on Monday, was postponed until the Criminal Sittings, on the 26th August next, in order that the Chief Justice might have an opportunity in the mean time of completing his enquiries with reference to the prisoner, so as to determine whether any difference could be made in his punishment, on account of the recommendation of the Jury to mercy.

MURDER

The trial of Tommy, an Aboriginal native, who was under committal for murder at Grafton, was postponed until the August sittings, upon the application of the ATTORNEY-GENERAL, in consequence of there being, at present, no interpreter.

THE QUEEN v. M'CLELLAND.

The trial of the above case being also postponed until next Sessions; His HONOR agreed upon the application of prisoner's attorney, to admit the prisoner to bail, on furnishing three sureties of £100 each. The sureties to be taken in Chambers on Thursday.

GAOL DELIVERY.

The cases of James Glover, for manslaughter; Michael Flinn, for horse stealing; Peter Roony, for an indecent assault; and Patrick Hackett, for a similar offence, were postponed until the August Sittings. The remainder of the prisoners in the calendar were awaiting the trial at the Quarter Sessions.

EQUITY JURISDICTION.

Before His Honor the PRIMARY JUDGE in Equity.

RANKIN v. HEATHORNE.

The plaintiff in this suit obtained a writ of ne exeat colonia against the defendant on an affidavit stating that the defendant owed him a large sum of money, and that according to his belief, he was about to leave the colony. The plaintiff and defendant it appeared had been in partnership as brewers, the term of which partnership expired on the 1st of May. The defendant was the manager; the agreement between them contained no clause as to when an account of the profits was to be taken. Whether they were made or not, the defendant did not pay the plaintiff his share, nor has he paid any money on account of it. There was some evidence, however, to show that he had made a promise to pay £200 on account thereof. The plaintiff alleges there were profits arising from the transactions of the partnership, to get at which is the object of the suit. The defendant and plaintiff live at Bathurst. The former left Bathurst for Sydney, per mail, one day during the last month; soon after he was followed by the plaintiff; they both put up at the same inn in Sydney, and lived, eating from the same table, for four or five days; when the plaintiff obtained the writ of ne exeat colonia, under it the defendant was arrested, and had to give the usual security before he could get his release from gaol. The object of the present motion was to set aside that writ, and all subsequent proceedings. In support of this motion, it was submitted, that the affidavit on which the writ was granted was not strong enough according to the author ties. The deponent ought to have gone on to state facts that would lead the Court legitimately to believe—and so the party applying for the writ—that the party applied against was really about to quit the country. To show that the defendant in this case was not going to leave the country, though which fact he absolutely and emphatically denied, affidavits were read showing that the defendant had left his wife and family at Bathurst, in a house lately furnished by him; that upon leaving, he got his deeds from his solicitor, telling him that he was going to Sydney to raise money on them; that he arrived in Sydney, and lived at the same hotel with the plaintiff for four or five days; and further, that one object of his coming to Sydney was, to buy machinery for the purpose of finishing and carrying on a brewery at Bathurst on his own account. The above facts were sworn to by the defendant, and with some of which he stated the plaintiff, at the time the writ issued, was acquainted. The other affidavits were from parties who had received orders from the defendant for machinery, &c., since his arrival in town. From the above facts it was said the only conclusion a party could come to was, that the defendant's intention was not to leave the colony. It was therefore contended, that the writ being granted improvidently, ought to be set aside with costs. On the other hand, it was said, the writ was properly issued. Relying upon the conduct of the defendant in refusing to account, promising to pay money on account of the profits, and the next moment resting upon the strict letter of the partnership agreement: according to which, perhaps, he was not bound to account until the partnership was at end. These and other circumstances, it was said, were sufficient to rouse the suspicions of the plaintiff. But if the Court was of opinion the writ ought to be discharged, it was submitted, considering the conduct of the defendant, the motion ought to succeed without costs, and the defendant ought to be restrained from bringing any action. In reply it was contended that the Court, if it granted the application, could only do so according to the authorities, with costs, and without imposing condition as to bringing an action.

Mr. FISHER appeared in support of the motion, and Mr. BROADHURST contra.

His HONOR said, he was of opinion that the defendant's affidavit had fully answered that on which the writ issued; but the question was whether the application ought to succeed with costs, and without the condition restraining the defendant from bringing any action he may be advised to bring. On these points in would be necessary to consider the authorities.

His HONOR having disposed of some motions of course, the Court was adjourned until Thursday next.

In the course of the day, His Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE intimated that the Insolvent Court would sit to-day at ten o'clock, instead of eleven o'clock, the day being set apart to celebrate the turning of the "First Turf of the Railway."

SUPREME COURT RULES.

In the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

THURSDAY the twenty-seventh day of June, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and fifty.

APPEARANCE AND PLEADING IN ACTIONS.

The following General Rules are hereby established; to take effect on the First day of August next.

Filing Declaration. Prac. 93.

1. On the last day limited for the Defendant's Appearance, or within eight days next following, (unless a Judge shall allow further time for that purpose,) the Plaintiff shall file his declaration; or the Defendant may sign a Judgment of Non Pros.

Failure to Appear, &c. Prac. 158.

2. Where a Defendant, having been duly served with a Writ of Summons, or arrested on a Writ of Capias, shall fail to appear, or to put in bail, according to the exigency of the Writ, the Plaintiff may, after expiration of the time thereby limited, on filing such Writ, and the Return thereto, enter an Appearance for him according to the Statute; and proceed as if such Defendant had appeared in person.

Time for Pleading. Prac. 157.

3. Within four days after the day so limited for appearing, or putting in bail, (or within four days after the filing of the Declaration, where not filed until after that day,) the Defendant shall, without any Rule or Demand in that behalf, be bound to plead or demur to the Declaration; or, in default thereof, the Plaintiff may sign Judgment against him by Nil Dicit.—Provided that the Court or a Judge may allow further time, (or, after Judgment, let the Defendant in to plead,) as in the like cases at present.

Notice of Appearance. Prac. 156.

4. But, where the Defendant shall appear, and shall, on or before the last day limited for appearing, give the Plaintiff Notice of such Appearance, he shall have eight days time to plead or demur, after that day; or after the filing and delivery of the Declaration, where not filed (or not delivered) until after that day.

Notice of Bail. Ibid

5. In like manner, where the Defendant shall in due time put in and perfect Special Bail, and shall give the like Notice thereof, he shall have eight days' time to plead or demur, instead of four days only.

Copy of Declaration.

6. In every case where such Notice shall be given, the Plaintiff (as soon afterwards as shall be practicable) shall deliver a Copy of his Declaration to the Defendant. And, if the Defendant do not plead or demur thereto within the time limited as last aforesaid, or such further time as may have been allowed for that purpose, the plaintiff may then sign Judgment of Nil Dicit against him.

Failure to reply, &c. Prac. 169.

7. Where either Party shall fail to reply, rejoin, demur, or join in demurrer, as the case may require, within the time allowed in that behalf, the adverse Party may sign Judgment of Non Pros. or Nil Dicit, as the case may be. Provided that further time may, in every case, be allowed, as at present.

ALFRED STEPHEN, C.J.

WHEAT AT THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.—The following letter appears in a recent number of the South Australian Register.—"Port Elizabeth, 28th March, 1850. Dear Sir,—Should there be a superfluity of wheat in the Australian Colonies this year, they will find a ready sale here, (Port Elizabeth). As yet we have always been supplied with bread stuffs from Cape Town, for several reasons:—1st because this (the Eastern Province) cannot, or at least does not, grow a merchantable description of wheat; and 2nd, when wheat was brought here there were no mills to grind it; but within these last two years we have no less than three large steam mills erected here for grinding wheat—one belonging to Mr. J. O. Smith, one to Coleman and Murray, and the other to Mr. W. Cock, besides several water-mills. Unfortunately, what little wheat was grown here this season has been destroyed by the locust; and although at this time of the year wheat is cheaper than at any other, good wheat cannot be purchased for less than 8s. 6d. to 9s. per bushel. I myself witnessed a sale the day before yesterday at 27s. per bag of 180 lbs., of 150 bags of Australian wheat, brought from the Mauritius, and I have no doubt in less than three months a higher price could be obtained, indeed I am certain of it. The best wheat is now selling in the market at Cape Town at 20s. 6d. per 180lbs., the expense of Bay agency, shipping, &c., &c., it cannot be landed here under 26s. I am surprised at vessels from Adelaide going on to Cape Town with their corn, when they can always command from 1s. 6d. to 2s. more here than there. The Australian flour is not liked here, and if not immediately used it is apt to get bad; but wheat is a sure sale. Port Elizabeth is, as I stated in my last, the nearest port in the colony to Australia. Should sales not be effected here, vessels can always go on to the Cape, and touching at this port will not detain them more than twenty-four hours, as all vessels from the eastward make Cape Receif. You will hear from me again in a few weeks."

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Permit me to correct an error published in yesterday's Herald, of two men committed for trial on Saturday for an unnatural offence, one a soldier of the 11th Regiment, and the other should be a discharged soldier from the 50th Regiment, "instead of the 68th Regiment," as published by you.

Yours, obediently,
W. N.

Sydney, July 2.

P.S.—Hackett is the man's name of the 50th; there is no man of that name in the 58th, nor discharged from it in the colonies.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Permit me through the medium of your columns to suggest, for the consideration of Mr. Lamb's Committee on Colonial Banking, the propriety of exhibiting the amount of Government Securities held by each Bank, as a portion of their assets—in revising the sworn tabular return a column may be inserted for this, distinguishing it from the lump sum of "Bills and all other Securities held by the Bank."

Your obedient servant,
SCRUTINEER

DEATH BY SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.—The following extraordinary occurrence is related in the Gazette des Tribunaux:—"A few days ago, in a tavern near the Barrière de l'Etoile, a journeyman painter, named Xavier C——, well-known for his intemperate habits, while drinking with some comrades, laid a wager that he would eat a lighted candle. His bet was taken, and scarcely had he introduced the flaming candle into his mouth when he uttered a slight cry, and fell powerless to the ground. A blueish flame was seen to flicker about his lips, and, on an attempt being made to offer him assistance, the bystanders were horror-struck to find that he was burning internally. At the end of half an hour his head and the upper part of his chest were reduced to charcoal. Two medical men were called in, and recognised that Xavier had fallen a victim to spontaneous combustion. This conflagration of the human frame is frightfully rapid in its progress; bones, skin, and muscle, all are devoured, consumed, and reduced to ashes. A handful of dust on the spot where the victim fell is all that remains."

THE ADVERTISEMENT DUTY.—Among the Parliamentary papers issued during the last session was one showing the number of advertisements on which duty was paid in each year from 1835 to the end of 1840. This is the last return, and as the subject is to be brought before the House of Commons by Mr. Ewart on Thursday, the information contained in the return is of some value. In England the number of advertisements in 1826 was 775,356, and the duty (3s. 6s. each) was £135,687 6s.; in 1827, the number was 765,593, and the duty £133,978 15s. 6d.; in 1828, the number was 779,250, and the duty £136,368 15s.; in 1829, the number was 774,445, and the duty £136,052 17s. 6d; in 1830, the number was 788,091, and the duty £137,915 18s. 6d.; in 1831, the number was 787,649, and the duty £137,838 11s. 6d.; in 1832, the number was 783,557, and the duty £ 37,122 9s. 6d. The duty was reduced to 1s. 6d. from the 5th of July, 1833. In 1834, the number was 977,441, and the duty £73,308 1s. 6d.; in 1835, the number was 1,038,041, and the duty £77,853 1s. 6d.; in 1836, the number was 1,173,136, and the duty £87,985 4s.; in 1837, the number was 1,206,680, and the duty £90,501; in 1838, the number was 1,315,581, and the duty £98,668 11s. 6d.; and in 1839, the number was 1,351,421, and the duty £101,356 11s. 6d.; and in 1840, the number was 1,425,387, and the duty £106,904, 0s. 6d.

TO THE

SYDNEY MORNING HERALD

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1850.

SYDNEY RAILWAY COMPANY.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF COUNCIL.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a further call has been made upon the Shareholders of the Sydney Railway Company by the Directors for Ten Shillings per share, which is hereby required to be paid (by those Shareholders who have not already paid it) to the Manager, at the Office of the Company, No. 247, Elizabeth-street, Sydney, on or before Thursday, the 18th day of July next.—Dated this 13th day of June, 1850.

CHARLES COWPER,
Manager.

10363

CLARENCE RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a limited number of Shares of £25 each, in the above-named Company, are still open for allotment.

The object of the Company is to import from England, and place in the trade, a suitable steam vessel of adequate power.

One-half the amount subscribed to be now paid down, and one-half by instalments, the first of which is not to be called for till twelve months from this date.

The Manager of the Commercial Bank is now ready to receive deposits, and to grant receipts to Shareholders on behalf of the Company.

Applications for shares to be made to the Provisional Committee, whose names are hereunto subscribed.

JOHN THACKER,
STUART A. DONALDSON,
OSWALD BLOXSOME,
JOHN DOBIE.

Sydney, June 14. 10524

CLARENCE RIVER STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

REPORTS having been industriously circulated that the Provisional Committee of the Clarence River Steam Navigation Company had ceased to operate, in consequence of the notice given by the Hunter River Steam Navigation Company that they intented to take up the trade of that rising district. The Provisional Committee hereby give notice that such reports are entirely without foundation.

The arrangements of the Clarence River Company are now so far completed, that Captain Wiseman has been engaged to proceed to England in the ship "Simlah," in which he has taken his passage, to sail 10th July next, to select, or superintend the building of, as the case may be, and bring out an iron steam vessel suitable for the purpose, of which he is to take command; his long experience in the Clarence River trade peculiary qualify him for that service.

This information will no doubt be very satisfactory to the residents in the New England and Clarence River districts. 11430

THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY,

487, GEORGE-STREET, SYDNEY.

MOST OF THE CLERKS OF PETTY SESSIONS IN THE COUNTRY TOWNS ARE APPOINTED AGENTS.

The business of this Company is threefold.

1ST. LIFE INSURANCE, which enables persons, to provide for the widowed, orphans, or others, at their decease.

2ND. DEFERRED ANNUITIES, which enables persons to secure for themselves, or their nominees, an independence in their old age, by means of an annuity punctually paid as long as they may live.

3RD. ENDOWMENTS for children, payable at the ages of 14, 20, or 21.

THOSE persons who rely upon labour for their support have an opportunity, by means of LIFE ASSURANCE, of becoming as secure from future want, in the event of a parent or husband's decease, as are those who are possessed of houses or stock. It frequently happens that families are suddenly plunged into penury and want, by the death of a parent or husband, who might have been comfortably provided for, if the deceased had but used ordinary prudence in insuring his life. Wives ought to urge upon their husbands the necessity of making some provision for them, and their children, before it be too late. The premiums are so moderate, as to be within the reach of all who may wish to avail themselves of the advantages of Life Assurance. For instance, a person twenty years of age, would have to pay about £1 17s. 5d. per annum, or 8½d. per week, to secure £100 cash for whoever he might please to leave it, at his death.

In order to relieve any unforseen emergency, the Society will lend money on the security of Life Assurance and Deferred Annuity Policies, at a moderate rate of interest.

The Tables of Rates, Forms of Proposals, and all information, may be obtained at the Offices of the Society from 10 to 4, daily.

WILLIAM PERRY,
Secretary.

N.B.—Great advantages are held out to the first policies taken, as may be seen by the rules. 8709

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE SYDNEY RAILWAY COMPANY.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—I do myself the honour to inform you that, following the course pointed out by the Act of Incorporation of the Sydney Railway Company, it has been decided by lot that I shall be the retiring Director for the present year, and at the same time I beg respectfully to intimate to you that, being eligible for re-election, I am again a candidate for your suffrages.

The deep interest which I have always taken in the establishment of the Company has been evinced by my having been from the commencement one of the largest Shareholders, and by my having throughout the whole period of the existence of the Provisional Committee, and since the Company was incorporated, devoted much time and attention to carry it through times of great difficulty and embarrassment. I feel satisfied to rest my claims for support on the present occasion upon the successful result which has attended the exertions of the Provisional Committee and the first set of Directors. Contrary to the anticipations of many whose labours to prejudice the public mind against the undertaking have been unceasing—these exertions have been pre-eminently successful, and there is no longer any doubt remaining upon the public mind as to the practicability of this truly national undertaking.

On the first election you placed me in the gratifying position of second on the list. I can assure you that during the period of my continuance in office I have in no degree relaxed my exertions in your behalf, and if again chosen by you, I pledge myself that my best efforts shall be devoted to the carrying on still further towards completion the project with which I have been so long identified.

I have the honour to remain,
Ladies and Gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
CHARLES KEMP.

DISINFECTING FLUID!!!

ON SALE AT THE UNDERSIGNED'S,

SIR WILLIAM BURNETT'S patent DISINFECTING FLUID, in quart and pint bottles, for the disinfection of sick rooms, clothing, linen, &c., prevention of contagion, preservation of animal matter from putrescence, purification of bilge water, cesspools, drains, waterclosets, &c.

As a deodorizing and purifying agent, it is the best, the cheapest, and the most healthful. The operation of cleansing cesspools by Sir William Burnett's Fluid has been tested in thousands of instances in London and every part of Great Britain.

It does not stain the most delicate fabric, an advantage possessed by no other preparation offered to the public for similar purposes.

The highly flattering testimonials as published in the returns ordered to be printed by the House of Commons, in the years 1847 and 1848, can be seen on application at

COBDEN HOUSE.

JOHNSON AND WEIGHT beg to inform their friends and all buyers of DRAPERY, that from their recent large importations and very extensive purchases in the colony, they have now on hand an immense stock of all the most elegant and fashionable goods suitable for the present season. The greater part of which they will be compelled to dispose of previous to TAKING STOCK, at the end of this month.

J. and W. particularly impress upon the minds of their friends that, however reluctant they may be to sacrifice goods, they have fully determined that their SELLING LIST OF PRICES shall always be lower than any other house in Sydney. And in order to carry this resolution into effect, they have this day submitted their stock to a still further REDUCTION, which will enable the inhabitants of New South Wales to purchase drapery, &c., &c., at English prices.

VISITES, MANTLES, AND PALETOTS.

A superb assortment of the above on hand, embracing all the latest novelties and most modern designs received in Sydney.

These goods, from their ELEGANCE, QUALITY, and CHEAPNESS, entitle them to the immediate attention of all ladies who require any article of the kind.

An early call is solicited in this department, as they are sure to meet with ready sale, from the fact that many of these choice and rare goods will be sacrificed at prices actually below the ENGLISH cost.

GOOD WHITE SHIRTS
AT SMITH'S COLONIAL SHIRT MANUFACTORY, 87, PARK-STREET.

TO Gentlemen who prefer having their Shirts made to measure or order, J. T. Smith respectfully solicits them to give their directions during the winter months, as the influx of orders in the spring and summer renders it almost impossible to pay that strict and individual attention to the demands of all his numerous patrons that he really wishes to do; and from the comparatively few good shirt hands to be met with, great delay is often caused, which is unavoidable, for the two reasons assigned. J. T. S. suggests that his friends should now give their orders for what they are likely to require in the spring. A registry is kept of all measures and particulars; therefore, for those gentlemen who have been previously supplied at his manufactory and reside in the country, it will be only necessary to transmit their wishes through the post-office, and every possible care and attention shall be paid to them.

A large and varied stock always on hand, comprising—Plain and fancy shirts, with or without collars; extra large size ditto; yacht and regatta shirts, choice patterns; Scotch twill, &c. Boys' and youths' shirts of every description. Flannel shirts and drawers, cravats, braces, boot hose, &c.

Ladies' and children's under clothing in stock, or made to order. 5941

CORRECT TIME! CORRECT TIME!

A MATTER so essential to the proper conduct of business can only be ascertained and registered by means of solar and sidereal instruments and Astronomical Clocks;—all watches sold by D. DAVIS not only combine the improvements which modern science has introduced, with a view to insuring accurate performance, but they are proved and regulated by the above-named important instruments; and being imported direct from the manufacturers, are sold at such prices that persons requiring a Good Timekeeper need not be without one.

WARRANTY.

Every Watch sold at this establishment is warranted for two years, and a written guarantee given; should the watch require regulation, fresh oil, or other attention within the period of warranty, it will be done free of charge; after that time it will be cleaned and adjusted on the payment of 2s. 6d., if of the vertical construction; or 3s. 6d. if of the lever or horizontal, and no further charge will be made for attention during the then succeeding twelve months.

Customers in the country are informed that should any inaccuracy or defect appear within the two years of purchase, the carriage from any part will be paid, the error rectified free of charge, and the purchaser only allowed to be at the expense of the carriage to his residence.

The warranty is considered void should the watch with which it is given be put into the hands of another watchmaker; this regulation is necessary in consequence of the injury done to watches by incompetent workmen.

N.B.—Watches and Clocks of every construction carefully cleaned and repaired by competent workmen kept on the premises, at the following reduced prices:—

CROWN LANDS BEYOND THE SETTLED DISTRICTS.

(From Yesterday's Government Gazette.)

COLONIAL Secretary's Office, Sydney, 1st July, 1850.—With reference to the notice from this Office, dated 11th ultimo, respecting the renewal of existing licenses to depasture stock on Crown Lands beyond the Settled Districts of the colony, His Excellency the Governor directs it to be notified, that a modification of the terms of that notice has been sanctioned with respect to runs in the Port Phillip District, as explained in the subjoined copy of a notice, issued by His Honor the Superintendent of Port Phillip.

GOVERNMENT NOTICE,

Occupation of Crown Lands beyond the Settled Districts.

Superintendent's Office, Melbourne, 29th May, 1850.—Public notice is hereby given, to all occupants of Crown Land for pastoral purposes, beyond the Settled Districts of Port Phillip, that the renewal of license for such occupation, pending the issue of leases, which,

National Library of Australia http://nla.gov.au/nla.news-page1511973

in pursuance with the arrangement hitherto made, would take place from the 1st July next, and embrace the twelve months, ending 30th June, 1851, will only be effected for the six months ending 31st December, 1850, when, if requisite, further renewal for the entire year, commencing 1st January, and ending 31st December, 1851, will be sanctioned by His Excellency the Governor.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Tuesday, 25.—Forenoon calms, with thick fogs after eight o'clock; middle and latter parts, light north-westerly breezes; cloudy in part and hazy; night, calm and clear.

Wednesday, 26.—Morning, light westerly airs, damp, no clouds; calm or nearly so all the middle and latter parts, and clear delightful weather; at midnight, and subsequently, some heavy showers of rain with thunder from the westward.

Thursday, 27.—Morning, light westerly airs, clouds sinking in the north-east; remained clear fine weather all the day, with the exception of some slight showers between eleven and twelve A.M.; wind strong and dry from west and by north after one P.M. till evening; night, light breezes and beautifully clear.

Friday, 28.—Morning, light west airs and calms; cirro-stratus forming a thin covering over the sky; middle and latter parts, moderately fresh breezes from the southward; sky became darkly overcast; some showers of rain between four and five o'clock, and at half-past five hard rain and hail mixed, after that, rain fell steadily for some hours, atmosphere very cold; strong keen wind from the south and by west through the night, some rain occasionally fore part.

Saturday, 29.—Moderate south-westerly breezes early part; particularly keen air; cumuli passing over; squally with frequent showers from about due south through the middle part, and continued very fresh, cold dirty weather, with showers at intervals P.M. Night, damp and cloudy, but scarcely any rain.

Sunday, 30.—Morning keen, beautifully clear atmosphere; moderate south-westerly breezes fore part; middle and latter parts light airs from south and by west, delightfully clear dry weather, no clouds. Night, also light winds and cloudless sky.

Monday, July 1.—Morning, light south-westerly breezes, dark fogs and cumulus passing over from southward; fresh southerly breezes all middle and latter parts; light passing showers occasionally middle part; smart showers again toward sunset, and between half-past eight and nine P.M. Night, light wind, cloudy without rain.

TRANSFERABLE AND REMITTABLE LAND AND IMMIGRATION DEBENTURES.

(From Yesterday's Government Gazette.)

COLONIAL Secretary's Office, Sydney, 1st July, 1850.—Sealed tenders will be received at this office until noon of Monday, the twenty-second of July, from persons desirous of advancing the whole or any portion of the sum of Ten Thousand Pounds on the following security, and subject to the undermentioned terms and conditions, viz.:—

1. Each tender must be for an even sum of hundreds of pounds, and must be endorsed "Tender for Debentures."

2. If the tender be accepted, Land and Immigration Debentures for £100 each, secured upon the Territorial Revenue of the Sydney or Middle District, will be issued for the sum advanced, and will bear interest at the rate of 3½d. per diem, or £4 18s. 10½d. per £100 per annum, payable half-yearly, on the 1st of January and 1st of July.

3. They will be receivable as cash at any time for the purchase of Crown Lands in the Sydney district, or for any other payment due on account of the Territorial Revenue within the same.

4. The principal will not otherwise be payable for a period of less than three years from the date of the Debenture; but it will be redeemable at par at any time thereafter, at the option of the Government, but not of the holder, on three months notice to that effect being given in the New South Wales or London Gazette, according as the same may be payable in the colony or in England,

5. The principal will also be redeemable at par, at the option of the holder for the time being after the expiration of five years from the date of the Debenture, on his giving three months' notice to that effect to the Colonial Agent General, in London, or the Colonial Treasurer in Sydney, as the case may be.

6. At the expiration of the three months' notice given either by the Government or the holder, the interest on the Debenture to which such notice shall apply, will cease and determine.

7. The principal and interest of each Debenture will be payable at the option of the holder for the time being, either in Sydney or London; any change which it may be desired to make in this respect, being previously registered at the Colonial Treasury, in Sydney, and in the office of the Colonial Agent General, in London, and endorsed upon the Debenture, which must be presented accordingly at both these Offices for that purpose.

8. Whenever a Debenture may be made payable in London, a duplicate thereof will be transmitted by the Colonial Treasurer to the Colonial Agent General by such opportunity as the holder may desire, in order that the same may be available on proof of the loss of the original.

9. The Debentures will be transferable, if made out in blank, in the same manner as Exchequer Bills; but if made payable to any individual or firm, then by endorsement as in the case of bills of exchange.

10. Any number of Debentures will, for the convenience of the holders, be consolidated into one or more of the aggregate amount, on application at the Colonial Treasury, provided that such consolidate Debentures shall be issued for even sums of £500 or £1000 only.

ROAD FROM PATERSON TO GRESFORD.—With reference to the Government Notice of 5th March last, relative to the intention of the Government to open a certain parish road from Paterson to Gresford, after due consideration of all objections to the proposed line of road which have been transmitted in pursuance of that notice, his Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, has confirmed the same, and it is therefore declared expedient to open and make the road referred to according to the map and plan to be seen at the Office of the Surveyor-General; and all persons intending to claim compensation in respect of the line, are reminded that notice must be served upon the Colonial Secretary within forty days from the 2nd July, or they will be for ever foreclosed from such claim.

ROADS.—His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, having deemed it expedient to open and make parish roads from Merton to Cassilis; from Appin to Wollongong, via Mount Keera; and from the Oakhampton Road to West Maitland, across the Falls and through the Bolwarra Estate to the Paterson High Road, surveys or tracings showing the intended lines of the roads, are now deposited in the office of the Surveyor-General in Sydney, and all persons interested therein, are requested to transmit in writing to the Clerk of the Executive Council, within one month from this date (July 2), any well grounded objections which may exist to the formation of the roads.

WEST MOLONG.—A site has been fixed upon for a village at West Molong. A copy of the approved plan may be seen at the office of the Surveyor-General, at Sydney, or at the Police-office, Molong.

ADJUSTED NEW RUN.—It is hereby notified for general information, that the adjusted new run called Barbagel, situated in the district of Lachlan, and described as No. 4 in the notice from the Crown Lands Office of the 29th ultimo, headed "Adjusted New Runs," has been withdrawn from public competition, it appearing from a recent report received from the Commissioner of that district, that a portion of it is already in authorised occupation.—GEORGE BARNEY, Chief Commissioner of Crown Lands.—Yesterday's Government Gazette.

APPOINTMENTS.—His Excellency the Governor has appointed the following gentlemen to be magistrates of the territory and its dependencies:—Thomas Henry Baylis, Esq., of Bogee; John Blackstone, Esq., of Ryalston, Dabee; Edward King Cox, Esq., of Rawden, Dabee; Alfred Sandeman, Esq., of Beanaraba, Darling Downs; and John Coldham, Esq., of Grasedale Grange, in the District of Port Phillip.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—An inquest was yesterday held at Driver's, the Three Tuns, King-street, on view of the body of Henry Warner, then lying dead in the Sydney Infirmary. It appeared from the evidence of Dr. MacEwan, that deceased was received into the Infirmary on the 11th ultimo, labouring under a compound fracture of the arm; it was considered necessary to amputate, within forty-eight hours after which erysipelas supervened, under which he sank. He died on Sunday. Deceased was a very decent hard-working man, who for some years past had gained a livelihood by retailing vegetables; on the day on which he was received into the Infirmary, he, by some unfortunate accident fell off his cart, and injured his hand. The result was as stated by Dr. MacEwan. The Jury found a verdict of died from the effects of injuries accidentally received.

TWENTY POUNDS REWARD, OR A CONDITIONAL PARDON.—It having been represented to the Government, that on the night of the 18th ultimo, a stack of wheat, containing about two hundred bushels, the property of Richard Hawke, of Native Dog Creek, in the district of Hartley, was maliciously set on fire; His Excellency the Governor has directed it to be notified, that a reward of twenty pounds will be paid to any free person or persons who may, within six months from the present date, (July 2), give such information as shall lead to the apprehension and conviction of the party or parties guilty of the above outrage; and if the person giving such information be a prisoner of the Crown, application will be made to Her Majesty for the allowance to such prisoner of the Crown of a Conditional Pardon.

THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES GOVERNMENT BILL.

(From the Spectator, February 23.)

THE exact truth with respect to opinion in New South Wales on the question of one or two Legislative Houses, has not yet been stated. There have been contradictory statements on the subject, neither of which is correct. The colony, say official people here, prefers a single House: no, says the other side, the colony objects to a single House—prefers two Houses. Both statements are right, and both wrong. The colony would prefer two Houses—would prefer a likeness of the British constitution, as respects the number of legislative bodies—but on a certain condition; on condition, namely, that the second or Senate-like House shall not be composed of mere nominees of the distant Colonial Office. Rather than have a second House so composed, the colony wishes to preserve the one House composed in part of nominees and partly of elected members. And the reason is plain. The body of Downing-street nominees have less power, when mixed in one House with twice their own number of elected members, than they would have if they formed a separate legislative body. As a distinct legislative body, they could at any rate prevent all legislation that was not agreeable to themselves, the nominees of Downing-street: Downing-street, through its House of Nominees, could nullify every act of the House of Representatives; whereas, being mixed, in the proportion of only one-third, with the representatives of the colony, the creatures of Downing-street are comparatively weak and harmless. Therefore, says the colony, give us two Houses, provided both be so constituted as virtually to represent our wants, opinions, and wishes: on that condition we prefer two Houses; for we anxiously desire to possess a constitution as like as possible to that of our mother-country: but if a large portion of our whole Legislature is to consist of nominees of the distant Colonial Office, as it does now, we prefer having them, as we have them now, in the same House with our representatives, where, being a minority, they have far less power of hinderance and interference than they would have as a separate co-equal branch of the Legislature. If any of our law-makers are to be nominees of Downing-street, a single house is the better for us, because it is more colonial—more local—less subject to Downing-street—more capable of staying and forcing Downing-street on occasions of need (that is, whenever Downing-street meddles with our local affairs)—than a distinct representative house would be if it were controlled by a distinct house of nominees. Give us two houses, provided both be colonial; but do not divide our present house into two, making one of them a mere tool of Downing street: rather leave us as we are, with the nominees of Downing-street considerably swamped by double their number of elected members. We do not like our present constitution; but we like it far better than the proposed substitute.

This view of the question, which is really that of New South Wales and the other colonies, will come home to us in angry words about a month hence, just too late to serve as a guide to Parliament. If in the interval we re-enact the present constitution of New South Wales, and extend it to the other colonies, we shall have given to all of them a constitution which none of them like; or if we now place the nominee members of the New South Wales Council in a separate house, and extend that constitution to the other colonies, we shall have done what all of them will like still less. In either case, but most in the latter case, we shall have belied our own professions, (being those of Lord John Russell, which public opinion here approves,) by framing for these colonies a constitution of government which, instead of establishing local authority in local matters, provides, first, by means of nomineeship, for a large amount of imperial authority in local matters; and, secondly, by means of representation, for discord and collision between the representative and the nominated portions of the Legislature—between the colonies and the mother-country.

But then, says Downing-street, our bill authorizes the one House to divide itself into two, if it pleases, by constituting the nominee members a separate House. Yes, but that is just what it will not please—what the representative two-thirds will never allow. And if the one House were authorised to frame two, neither of which should consist of nominees, but both of persons chosen somehow by the colony independently of Downing-street, this would not be giving to the colony authority to please itself; it would be giving that power, not to the colony, but to a legislative body, which by our own admission is unfit to last. We say that the present legislative body is bad, and ought to be amended, (for if not, why authorize it to destroy itself and set up another?); and then we confide the work of constitutional reform to the very body which we acknowledge to be unfit for even common legislation. The scheme is nonsense reduced to practice.

Then what ought to be done? If the object is to carry Lord John Russell's declaration of principles into effect, we ought to do one of two things: either we ought to establish two Houses, both of them representing colonial interests and opinion, as the two Houses of Britain and the two Houses of the United States represent British and American interest and opinion; or we ought to confide the business of determining whether there shall be one House or two, and of what sort both shall be if two there are, not to the present Legislature of New South Wales, in which the Governor and nominee members of Council largely represent the Colonial Office, but to the elected members of the Council by themselves, without the participation either of Downing-street nominee members or of the Downing-street Governor. In other words, (supposing always the object to be as aforesaid,) we ought either to make a good constitution of "local self-government" for these Colonies, or we ought to give them constituent authority to make one for themselves. The latter course, considering our ignorance of Colonial wants, wishes, and capacities, would probably be the best; the former would be reasonable in itself, and agreeable to our professions: our actual course is contrary to our professions, and contrary to all reason as well.

But again, says Downing-street, the Colonies would rather have the proposed measure than no change. Yes, the four Colonies would, which at present have no representation in their government: they will be happy to receive the means which New South Wales already possesses of resisting the Colonial Office, harassing it, making government impossible, and so in the end obtaining that real management of their local affairs, without which none of these Colonies will ever again be at rest or at peace with the Mother-country. And there are provisions of the bill, such as some local authority with regard to the waste lands, and some increased local jurisdiction in money-matters, which New South Wales will cheerfully accept as means of at once augmenting Colonial and diminishing Colonial-Office influence—as means of getting more local self-government through making government from Downing-street more and more difficult, and more and more troublesome and undesirable for Downing-street itself. But what a way of establishing Lord John's "local self-government" for these colonies! not to mention the risk of sovereign independence being taken some fine day, when the patience of the colonists shall be exhausted in conflicts with that Mother Country which resides in the great house at the bottom of Downing-street.

And this brings us to the scheme of federation. Federation by force—federation without the free assent of all the parties to it—is a measure of tyranny. It is of the very essence of a permanent or even tolerable federation, that every state composing it shall enter it by free will. The wise men who founded the American Union were deeply impressed with this main principle of the federal tie: they knew that a forced federation is like a forced marriage—almost sure to be unhappy, and only fit for divorce. The Australian-Colonies-Government Bill authorizes any two of the colonies to force the other three into a federation against their will; and it greatly encourages one of them to join in the exercise of so tyrannical a power. It does this by decreeing, first, that not the colonies as co-equals, but each colony according to its population, shall be represented in the Federal Legislature, (a blot that was smartly hit by Mr. Frederick Peel); and, secondly, that the capital town of New South Wales shall be the seat of the Federal Government. Thus, New South Wales, whose population exceeds that of the other colonies, and whose federal representatives would be always at home, whilst those of the other colonies must travel great distances in order to attend meetings of the Legislature, will virtually command the Federal Government, and will be able to force upon the other colonies such general laws as New South Wales may deem most conducive to its own interests even in opposition to theirs. The case would be less grievous if the principal town of New South Wales were, as Washington in America was at the time of its institution as a federal capital, near the geographical centre of the federated group; whereas it is far away from the centre of the whole country which is to be subject to the federal authority. This, then, we say it confidently, is a monstrous provision. The proper substitute for it would be to enact, that any two or more of the colonies shall be free to join in a federation when they shall see fit, and on such terms only as they shall freely approve with respect to the constitution of the Federal Legislature, to subjects of federal authority, and to the seat of the Federal Government. Were this done, it is highly probable that the five colonies, or at any rate four of them, would agree to a federation for some few general purposes. And even as it is, the offer of authority to federate may not be rejected by any of the colonies; but if it is accepted and acted upon, the object of the colonies will be, not comfortable useful government as respects general purposes, which is the proper object of a federation, but the creation of an Australian force—the force of union—capable of wresting from Downing-street the uncontrolled Australian management of Australian affairs. These evils of an unjust federation are as nothing compared with those of government from Downing-street; so, this most unjust federation may be snatched at, as representation will be though controlled and hindered by nomination, because it may be deemed a potent means of obtaining through a more formidable agitation, the sine qua non of Colonial peace and prosperity—complete independence of Downing-street in all local matters.

Amongst these matters, money-matters will be deemed the most important. The bill reserves for Downing-street a large control over the money-matters of all the colonies. There is less of this distant control over money-matters than the bill of last year proposed; but very important items of expenditure in the colonies, of money derived from taxation of the colonies, are scheduled or stereotyped by this measure of the British Parliament. As money-matters are those on which colonies, as well as the only nation from which colonies now emanate, are the most sensitive—the least disposed to tolerate any authority which, being distant, is necessarily ignorant and careless—as the interference of England with their money-matters is just what the colonists of England, being English, hate most of all—Parliament would do wisely to strike out of these Downing-street constitutions every provision that touches colonial money-matters. And it would be a still wiser course, if, as respects cases of removal from office in the colonies, in which the Imperial Government shall differ from the colonial in thinking that compensation for loss of office ought to be given, the compensation-money were to be provided by the Imperial Government. As it is, every man acquainted with the colonies knows—is perfectly certain—that questions of compensation to officers who have been forced upon the colonies, who have illtreated and crowed over the colonies, and whom, when deprived of power, the colonists will despise as much as they hate them now, must prove a source of bitter quarreling between the colonies and Downing-street—of colonial irritation and ill-will towards the nation which permits such follies as that we are denouncing. Why should we meddle at all with the money matters of these far-distant colonies? Or if we do, let us at least cease to talk big, with Lord John Russell, about our desire to establish a real government of the colonies by the colonists themselves.

Lord John doubtless believes, (and so does Mr. Frederick Peel) that these constitutions will give to the Colonies some considerable amount, at any rate, of real local self-government. Mr. Peel tells us very distinctly why he thinks so; and Lord John Russell's reason for this belief is probably the same: for this is the foundation of the general belief that the measure which has been framed in the Colonial Office gives effect to the declarations of principle made in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister. "It is," said Mr. Peel, "what I conceive to be the main principle of the bill, that has my hearty approval; I mean the principle of popular representation as an indispensable institution in our Colonial Governments." But does representation in a colony give colonial self-government? It does not. There was representation in Lower Canada, with a most democratic suffrage, for very many years before the rebellion of 1837. That "indispensable institution" taught the French people of Lower Canada, who before it was given to them had not conceived the idea of local self-government, to understand and ardently to desire the power of managing their own affairs: but it did not give them this power. On the contrary, for about twelve years before the rebellion, during three successive Parliaments, the government of Lower Canada was carried on—the public affairs of the colony were exclusively managed—all power in local matters was exclusively wielded—by a small minority, which hardly ever had the support of more than a quarter—which sometimes for years together was only supported by a sixth, and sometimes only by an eighth—of the representative body. Representation was given, but without its proper consequences. The proper consequences of representation have been put into an expression that is now familiar—"responsible government"; that is, government by those who enjoy the confidence and can obtain the support of the representative body. Lower Canada was not governed by those in whom the majority of the representative body confided; it was governed continually by those whom the majority distrusted, hated, and vehemently opposed. The opposition was always in office. The official class and their adherents—being a small minority, but supported, as most of the officials were appointed, by Downing-street, and having, in the Downing-street Governor and the nominees of Downing-street in an Upper House, a preponderating power in the whole government—set the representatives of the people at defiance, and ruled in spite of them; how shamefully, Lord Durham's Report fully set forth. In that case, the grant of representation without its consequences has been justly likened to the excessive inconvenience and absurdity of lighting a fire in your room with a view to pleasant warmth, and then stopping up the chimney. The blinding and stifling effect was inevitable. The government of Lower Canada, with abundant representation, was, to use Lord Durham's apt expression, "a constituted anarchy." This is what we are going to make for the Australian Colonies. These new constitutions give representation to the colonists, but give them nothing else: all the rest of what composes the machinery of government will be appointed by Downing-street, and be solely responsible to that distant bureau. The greater distance in the Australian case between the London Office and the distant colonies—being more than four times the distance between Downing-street and Quebec—makes the present case incalculably worse: for the evils of distant government are intolerable in nearly exact proportion to the distance between authority and its subjects.

In answer, some official gentleman may say, Canada and the other North American colonies have now got responsible government: we of the Colonial Office do not interfere with them; though we retain the power to interfere by means of our Governors and Councils of nominees, we do not exercise it. And that is, to a considerable extent, true. Responsible government does to a great extent exist in Canada, notwithstanding a constitutional machinery for preventing it. The parts of the constitution of Canada which authorise Downing-street to govern there, will not work. Practically the rebellions in both Canadas, with their immense cost to England, the exposure of the old system by Lord Durham's mission, the spread of the population of the United States to the very frontier of Canada, the impossibility of keeping up the constituted-anarchy state of things, the certainty that if the attempt were made it would cause British North America to join the American Union in spite of whatever efforts England might make to prevent it—all these things have conspired to wring from Downing-street the concession, in practice, of the proper consequences of representation for Canada and the other North American Colonies. But the concession was made with extreme reluctance, slowly, costively, and painfully by those who had to part with power. For proof we refer to the whole history of that concession through the colonial administrations of Lord Sydenham, Sir Charles Bagot Lord Metcalfe, and Lord Elgin. Each of those servants of Downing-street yielded something—as much as he could not help yielding. They all yielded to the danger of a refusal, considering what had gone before, and the proximity of the United States. What responsible government our American colonies have obtained, they owe to threats and to their position by the side of free and sympathising America; and even now the reluctant, hesitating, half-and-half vacillating manner of the concession, together with a huge remnant of Imperial meddling in local affairs by means of Imperial troops supporting and adding by extrinsic means to the local force of the party that happens to predominate for the moment, exposes England to the risk of losing her North American colonies by means of the annexation of Canada to the United States. But let us view the Canadian case in its most favourable light—let us believe that the concession of responsible government was done quickly enough, and well enough for success — still, there is nothing in Australia which insures that the concession will there be made at all. Australia has no adjoining United States as Canada has, no adjoining France as Jersey and Guernsey have, to make England afraid of attempting to govern that most distant part of the world by an authority resident in London. In this measure, which again comes before the House of Commons on Friday se'nnight, the machinery is perfect for keeping up in Australia enough of Colonial Office government in local affairs for producing and maintaining, with the aid of representation, the state of the fire without a chimney. For proof we refer to the bill itself, and to the many acts which must be studied in order to understand its purport. This last defect of the bill—its dependence on many other acts—was clearly pointed out by Sir William Molesworth and Mr. Roebuck. Considering all its defects, we cannot help saying, that if the Members of the House of Commons cared as much about the Australian Colonies as they do about any railway or turnpike bill, they would not fail to alter this Australian Constitution in most of its leading provisions.

The New York papers are much crowded with details of a terrible boiler explosion, which has caused a loss of more than sixty lives. The boiler of the steam-engine (200 horse power) in the printing press and machine shop of Mr. Alvah B. Taylor, in Hague-street, blew up on the 5th instant, and totally demolished the large building which it supplied with motive power. The house was very large—six stories high, and massively built; but such was the enormous force of the explosion, that eye-witnesses say the whole pile was lifted from its foundation several feet into the air; it then seemed to swell, gently but suddenly; and when it fell, it crumbled into a heap of small fragments, which was almost instantly in a blaze of fire. The noise was astounding: the whole city rushed to the scene; and in a short time the exertions made to extinguish the flames were so far successful that the work of searching for the buried workmen began. It was learned that many more than a hundred persons had been in the building, and it seemed that every one of these must have been struck dead or been burnt to death. In a short time, however, many were found near to the surface of the ruins still alive. The bravery of the firemen, and the magnanimous endurance of many of the sufferers, are the subject of striking episodes. While the charred ruins were constantly fanned by the wind into fresh combustion, the cold was so severe that the water froze everywhere soon after it left the engines; so that the torments of those imprisoned in the ruins were varied between burning, freezing, and drowning to death. Two or three cases literally illustrated these horrible vicissitudes of suffering. In one of the engine-cellars, some boys and a man were jammed down by pieces of the machinery; they remained alive a long time, urging the firemen to save their lives, and being in turn encouraged to bear up; but all excepting one boy of fifteen died before the last obstructions to their removal could be raised. This boy was imprisoned twenty hours by an iron bar across his chest, which prevented him from stirring more than one arm; while the flames were only kept off by the water of the firemen. He conversed in a most courageous spirit for many hours; related how the others were gradually dying off around him, and sent messages of affection to his mother, who was kept from the spot. At last his spirit sank, and he prayed to be dragged out without his leg. He was, however, got out without loss of limb; but his head, hand, and the lower side of his body, were much burnt, and it was only "hoped" he would recover. At the latest moment nearly a score of dead bodies had been removed; and some fifty were still missing; about sixty of those saved had been badly burnt or maimed.

THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA AND LOUIS NAPOLEON.—There is an article in the Napoleon giving the different forms employed by the Emperor of Russian in the correspondence with the Sovereigns of France at different periods. The letters of the Emperor Alexander to the Emperor Napoleon began with "Very dear friend and brother," and terminated in the same manner. Under the restoration the terms used were "good friend and brother." After the revolution of 1830 the Emperor Nicholas addressed Louis Philippe as "Très serenissime, très excellent, et très puissant Louis Phillip, le Roi des Français," &c., but without the words friend and brother. The style adopted to Louis Napoleon, President of the French Republic is the following:—At the beginning of the letter, "A notre grand et bon ami, Monsieur le President de la République Française," and at the end "Grand et bon ami," and on one occasion "votre très affectionné." The Emperor notifies to the President of the Republic all the events which occur in his family, such as marriages, births, deaths, &c., which was not the case under the government of Louis Philippe.—Galignani's Messenger.

THE FEMALE EMIGRATION SCHEME.—A correspondent of the Morning Post, using the signature "M. J. W.," exposes what "he cannot help feeling is to a certain extent a fraud upon the benevolent public," in the carrying out of Mr. Sydney Herbert's emigration scheme for the distressed needle-women. He has "heard from the very best authority, that the committee have almost entirely departed from their original intention; and that, instead of distressed needle-women, a perfectly different class of females have been selected." "I know," he says, "that in some cases young women who have been, and are at this moment, in situations as ladies' maids, with very high wages, have been selected as emigrants, and are about to sail to Australia provided with funds out of the money subscribed for the distressed needle-women. I am prepared to prove this. I know also, that a party had engaged a passage in a ship for himself and family, and a few days afterwards he stated to the owners of the ship that he should want two or three berths less than he at first mentioned, because some of his daughters would be provided with a passage by the committee presided over by Mr. Sydney Herbert. He was a man, I believe, quite able to pay for his own passage and the passages of his family."

MAJOR-GENERAL FAUNCE, C.B.—On the 1st inst. this general officer died at Clifton, near Bristol, aged 74. He entered the army as an ensign in the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, in which corps the whole of his distinguished military career was passed. In 1709 he served in Holland, and was present in the actions of the 2nd and 6th October of that year; in 1805 and 1806 he served with the army in Hanover; in 1807 at the siege and capture of Copenhagen; afterwards he served under Sir John Moore at Gottenburgh, and subsequently in Spain and Portugal throughout the operations there in 1808 and part of 1809: in the latter year Captain Faunce proceeded with the army to the Scheldt. From 1810 to 1813 he again served in the Peninsula, and was present at the storming and capture of Badajoz (where he was wounded), also at the battle of Salamanca and the investment of Bayonne early in 1814. Soon afterwards he proceeded to North America, and served there in the American war, including the battle of Blodensburg, the capture of Washington, the action near Baltimore, and the operations before New Orleans; and in January, 1815, Lieutenant Colonel Faunce was severely wounded. In that year he was nominated a Companion of the Bath; he had also received the gold medal for his services at Salamanca, and the silver one Corunna and Badajoz. Early in 1832, having then served in the regiment since 1795, and commanded it for ten years, Colonel Faunce retired from the command, and was selected to be the Inspecting Field Officer at Bristol, which appointment he continued to hold until 1841, when he became a general officer. He also then relinquished the appointment of one of the aides-de-camp to the Queen. In 1843 he was placed on the list of officers for distinguished services.
